Downs, 2014-12-08 Historians have long recognized the middle of the twentieth century as significant in the history of the modern South owing to a convergence of social change political realignment and cultural expansion This period in southern history has provided extensive material for scholars of race gender and politics In addition sweeping economic changes spread throughout the South permanently shifting the area's material resources Transforming the South examines this transition from farm to factory and explores the dramatic reshaping of the region's economy Matthew L Downs focuses on three developments in the Tennessee Valley the World War I era government nitrate plants and hydroelectric dams at Muscle Shoals Alabama the extensive work completed by the Tennessee Valley Authority and Cold War Space Age defense investment in Huntsville Alabama Downs argues that the modernization of the Sunbelt economy depended on cooperation between regional leaders and federal funders Local boosters lobbied to receive federal funds for their communities while simultaneously forming economic development organizations that would prepare those communities for further growth Economic reform also drove social reform as members of historically disenfranchised groups attained employment in the new industrial workforce they gained financial and political capital to push for social change Transforming the South considers the role played by the recipients of government funds in the mid twentieth century and demonstrates how communities exerted an unparalleled influence over the federal investments that shaped the southern economy
