

While nude women are a staple of commercial and art photography, the photographed male nude is often the target of censorship but seldom the subject of serious critical discussion. This is the first study to examine the unique interrelation between social perceptions of the nude and the medium of photography. Melody Davis focuses on the work of six artists—Robert Mapplethorpe, Lucas Samaras, John Coplans, George Dumau, Joel Peter Witton, and Dušan Makavejev—whose photography confronts societal prohibitions. To understand the taboo and silence that surround this subject, she addresses the many social and cultural fears that inhibit the presentation and discussion of photographed male nudity.

"An important contribution to a little understood subject, particularly admirable for the sensible and level-headed way in which it deals with the strong taboos which still surround the material. I think it will become an essential book in photographic studies, since the male nude plays an ever-increasing role in contemporary subject matter."

Edward Lucie-Smith

"Davis makes an important contribution to the new and growing literature on the sexual representation of the male body. This book is a must for anyone interested in gender studies in photography, film, or art history."

Peter Lehman, author of Running Scared: Masculinity and the Representation of the Male Body

Melody B. Davis is an independent writer and photographer who has taught in the fine arts departments of Montclair State College and State University of New York at Stony Brook. Her poetry and art criticism have been published in numerous journals and her photographs are in the permanent collections of the Brooklyn Museum, the Canadian Centre for Architecture (Montreal), the New York Historical Society, and the Museum of the City of New York. She is president of Proletika, a nonprofit corporation that brings literary events to Brooklyn.

The Male Nude In Contemporary Photography Visual Studies:

The Male Nude in Contemporary Photography Melody D. Davis, 1994-02-01 While nude women are a staple of commercial and art photography the photographed male nude is often the target of censorship but seldom the subject of serious critical discussion This is the first study to examine the unique interrelation between social perceptions of the nude and the medium of photography Melody Davis focuses on the work of six artists whose photography confronts societal prohibitions In order to understand the taboo and silence which surrounds this subject she addresses the many social and cultural fears that inhibit the presentation and discussion of photographed male nudity Because she deals with distinctions between the nude and the naked the interrelational and the pornographic the book has close connections with current debates about the impact of images and the limits of public tolerance of images of deviance Through the photographs of Robert Mapplethorpe Lucas Samaras John Coplans George Dureau Joel Peter Witkin and a film by Dusan Makavejev the author examines how the action ideal for the male body is challenged by an artistic medium in which man becomes the spectacle not the spectator By presenting three of photography's genres self portraiture portraits of others and allegorical nudes Davis is able to reveal the critical and theoretical issues which shape our understanding of photographed nudity and by extension representations of gender Author note Melody D Davis is an independent writer and photographer who has taught in the Fine Arts Departments of Montclair State College and State University of New York at Stony Brook Reader's Guide to Lesbian and Gay Studies Timothy Murphy, 2013-10-18 The Reader's Guide to Lesbian and Gay Studies surveys the field in some 470 entries on individuals Adrienne Rich arts and cultural studies Dance ethics religion and philosophical issues Monastic Traditions historical figures periods and ideas Germany between the World Wars language literature and communication British Drama law and politics Child Custody medicine and biological sciences Health and Illness and psychology social sciences and education Kinsey Report Queer Lens Paul Martineau, Ryan Linkof, 2025-06-24 Copiously illustrated Queer Lens explores the transformative role of photography in LGBTQ communities from the nineteenth century to the present day Photography's power to capture a subject representing reality or a close approximation has inherently been linked with the construction and practice of identity Since the camera's invention in 1839 and despite periods of severe homophobia the photographic art form has been used by and for individuals belonging to dynamic LGBTQ communities helping shape and affirm queer culture and identity across its many intersections Queer Lens explores this transformative force of photography which has played a pivotal role in increasing queer visibility Lively essays by scholars and artists explore myriad manifestations of queer culture both celebrating complex interpretations of people and relationships and resisting rigid definitions Featuring a rich selection of images including portraits of queer individuals visual records of queer kinship and documentary photographs of early queer groups and protests this volume investigates the medium's profound role in illuminating the vibrant tapestry of LGBTQ communities This volume is published to accompany an exhibition on view at the J Paul Getty Museum at the Getty Center
