Abstract: Thoracic trauma is a significant cause of morbidity and mortality worldwide, accounting for up to 35% of trauma-related deaths. It encompasses a wide spectrum of injuries, ranging from minor rib fractures to life-threatening conditions such as cardiac tamponade, pneumothorax, and great vessel injury. The etiology of thoracic trauma is broadly classified into blunt and penetrating mechanisms, with motor vehicle collisions, falls, and assaults being the most common causes. Prompt diagnosis and management are critical to improving patient outcomes, as many life-threatening thoracic injuries present with minimal external signs.

This review explores the pathophysiology, clinical presentation, diagnostic modalities, and management strategies for thoracic trauma. A high index of suspicion is required, particularly in high-impact injuries where significant intrathoracic damage may be present despite unremarkable external findings. The role of imaging techniques such as chest X-ray, ultrasonography (FAST), and CT scans is highlighted in detecting underlying injuries.

Management strategies follow the Advanced Trauma Life Support (ATLS) guidelines, prioritizing airway management, breathing support, circulation stabilization, and definitive care. Interventions range from conservative management with pain control and respiratory support to urgent surgical procedures such as thoracotomy or video-assisted thoracoscopic surgery (VATS) in severe cases. The prognosis is highly variable, depending on the severity of injury, presence of comorbidities, and timely medical intervention.

Additionally, this article discusses potential complications, including respiratory failure, infections, and neurovascular injuries, and emphasizes the importance of preventative measures and interdisciplinary team collaboration. Enhanced education on trauma prevention and advancements in minimally invasive surgical techniques are key to improving patient outcomes.

Keywords: Thoracic trauma, Blunt chest trauma, Penetrating chest injury, Rib fractures, Hemothorax, Pneumothorax, Cardiac tamponade, Trauma management, ATLS, Video-assisted thoracoscopic surgery (VATS)

Key Points:

Epidemiology: Thoracic trauma accounts for approximately 35% of trauma-related deaths and is a major contributor to global morbidity and mortality.

Mechanisms of Injury: Trauma is classified as either blunt (motor vehicle collisions, falls, assaults) or penetrating (gunshot wounds, stab injuries).

Diagnostic Approach: Imaging techniques such as chest X-ray, ultrasonography (FAST), and CT scan play a crucial role in the timely identification of injuries.

Life-Threatening Injuries: Immediate recognition and intervention are required for cardiac tamponade, massive hemothorax, tension pneumothorax, and major vascular injuries.

Management Strategies: Following ATLS protocols, interventions range from conservative pain management to invasive procedures like chest tube placement or thoracotomy.

Principles and Practice of Geriatric Surgery Ronnie Ann Rosenthal, Michael E. Zenilman, Mark R. Katlic, 2013-06-29

More than two decades ago in response to the special healthcare needs of the aging American population interest in the field of geriatric medicine began to grow and blossom in the United States In 1984 and 1985 under the editorial leadership of Christine K Cassel and William R Hazzard respectively two major textbooks devoted to the medical care of aged patients were published These scholarly comprehensive texts provided insight into the principles of aging and guidance in the care of the geriatric patient Three editions later the need to understand the special issues involved in the medical care of the elderly is widely accepted by internists primary care providers and medical specialists For the editors of this book the special issues involved in the surgical care of the elderly have been apparent for nearly as long Although there have been a few scholarly texts on the subject including one in 1990 by Mark R Katlic general acceptance of the concept of geriatric surgery by our surgical and medical colleagues has however lagged This is not the result of a proportionately smaller number of older patients with surgical disease because cancer cardiovascular disease and orthopedic problems are diseases of the aged It is rather the result of uncertainty about the value of surgery in the elderly and concerns about the risks of operations In the past such concerns prevented primary care givers from referring patients for surgical care and prevented surgeons from agreeing to operate
