The background of the slide is a detailed architectural site plan. It features a complex arrangement of buildings, represented by various rectangular and irregular shapes. A network of roads and pathways winds through the site. Numerous trees are depicted using circular symbols of different sizes and patterns, some with internal details representing foliage. The overall style is technical and professional, typical of a landscape or urban planning drawing.

University-Linked Retirement Communities Leon A Pastalan, Benjamin Schwarz, 2016-09-16 University Linked Retirement Communities focuses on the special attributes of a retirement community designed as an integral part of a university. It discusses the theoretical and practical aspects of such a retirement community which provides a rich and varied context for older people to be exposed to new ideas and learning opportunities for personal growth. The book centers on the premise that knowledge of basic principles of human behavior helps clarify understanding of the relationship between environment and behavior. Grounded in current research in the field of environment and aging, the book helps readers consider how the environment lends different aesthetic experiences and activity patterns to people of different backgrounds and capabilities. Some of the major environment and design issues chapters address are person environment fit, privacy, personal space, wayfinding, barrier free design, healthcare, personal growth, site development. University Linked Retirement Communities was developed from a two term course offered at the University of Michigan College of Architecture and Urban Planning that dealt with aging and the environment. The book is divided into two parts. Chapters in the first section discuss a variety of issues including the meaning of community, a day in the life of an elderly person living in a retirement community, site evaluation for a theoretical retirement community, and reviews of different physical components for a retirement community. The second section contains four student presentations of designs for a retirement community and comments on the projects from a design jury. This book is a valuable source of information for a variety of readers. University Linked Retirement Communities is of interest to potential users of eldercare services and their families, service providers, designers, architects, policymakers, and developers dealing with the elderly, and educators and students of architecture, environmental design, and other fields who are involved in housing and care options for senior adults.

Aging in the Designed Environment Margaret Christenson, Ellen D Taira, 2014-04-08 Aging in the Designed Environment is the key sourcebook for physical and occupational therapists developing and implementing environmental designs for the aging. The physical environment remains one of the most overlooked areas in environmental design. In order to move beyond this status quo persons responsible for planning elderly environments must develop a new understanding of ways in which their influence can improve the older adult's physical and mental functioning. Occupational and physical therapists as well as other health care professionals will benefit tremendously from the information presented in this unique volume. Designers, developers, and others with minimal health care background will also find a wealth of possibilities within Aging in the Designed Environment. Many concerns are dealt with in the book's five sections. The first section describes the implications that occur when there are changes in vision, hearing, taste, smell, touch, and the kinesthetic systems. Recommendations for environmental adaptation and modifications which may compensate for the changes in each of these systems are suggested. The second section stresses the relationship between behavior and environment. A variety of environmental attributes: comfort, privacy, accessibility, control, security, dignity, and their impacts are discussed along with information on ways that attributes can be incorporated into the living settings of older people. In section three, the focus is on the older person living independently in his or her own home, and section four covers exclusively the design and selection of chairs for older adults. New ways to assess and evaluate the home to promote independence beyond the traditional activities of daily living are addressed. The last section deals with redesigning the existing long-term care facility. The author examines some of the environmental conditions existing in specific facilities and provides recommendations to compensate for these circumstances. Journal of Rehabilitation Research & Development, 2007
