Adler, 1992 This book brings together a set of essays exploring the implications of new technologies in the workplace The common premise of the contributions is that the effective implementation of automation in manufacturing and engineering operations will typically require a workforce with a higher skill profile Examining the experience of countries in Europe Australia Asia and the U S the book analyzes four themes the new competencies required for effective implementation of new technologies how firms can develop these new competencies the implications of these changes for industrial relations and how firms can weave together business strategy technology strategy and personnel strategy to build competitive advantage with greater rather than lesser skills This argument contradicts the conventional assumption that automation will not only reduce the number of workers required to produce a given product but also require less skilled workers to do so The Platform Economy and the Smart City Austin Zwick, Zachary Spicer, 2021-09-22 Over the past decade cities have come into closer contact and conflict with new technologies From reactive policymaking in response to platform economy firms to proactive policymaking in an effort to develop into smart cities urban governance is transforming at an unprecedented speed and scale Innovative technologies promise a brave new world of convenience and cost effectiveness powered by cameras that monitor our movements sensors that line our streets and algorithms that determine our resource allocation but at what cost Exploring the relationship between technology and cities this book brings together an outstanding group of authors in the field to provide a critical and necessary examination of the disruption that is under way They look at how cities should understand and regulate novel technologies what can be learned from proposed and failed smart city projects and how innovative economies change the structure of cities themselves Contributors dig deeply into these and similar subjects contributing their voices to an important dialogue on the future of urban policy and governance
