

MASS MEDIA AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS, By Dennis Howitt. Oxford, Pergamon Press, 1982. 204 pp. $30 (cloth), $13 (paper). (International Series in Experimental Social Psychology, Vol. 2.)
POWER WITHOUT RESPONSIBILITY: THE PRESS AND BROADCASTING IN BRITAIN, By James Curran and Jean Seaton. Glasgow, Fontana Paperbacks, 1981. 395 pp. $7.95.

Both of these recent books attempt to assess the social impact of the media; to identify problem areas and, where possible, proceed towards a prescription for their cure. Beyond this however they have remarkably little in common. Howitt's book employs a social-psychological framework to work over some of the 'chestnuts' in media research whereas Curran and Seaton present an historical analysis, seeking to link the development of (British) media institutions to developments in the society in which they are embedded. If nothing else, these two works exemplify the diversity in the field of mass communications research.

Howitt's book is divided into five parts, the first dealing with psychological and social-psychological approaches to the problem of media 'effects' and the remainder ostensibly applying these insights to such topic areas as conflict, race, sex, violence, crime, education, health and welfare. Unusually in such a work, no concluding statement is supplied; the specificity of the treatment perhaps precluding this, with different (and understandably imprecise) conclusions being reached in different areas.

The focus throughout is narrow. 'Effects' are taken to be individual or small-group phenomena for the most part, though Howitt does briefly acknowledge (pp. 16-17) that broader conceptualisations are possible in what he calls the 'Cultural Ratification Model'. He is dismissive of this approach, pointing out that it has '... no great currency among psychologists interested in mass communications'; that it '... lacks a clear allegiance to empirical evidence'; and that '... it tends to be favoured by those of more Marxist or left-wing political beliefs' (Horror!). However, since he does not consider this work in any depth and in fact ignores the writings of Stuart Hall, Michele Barrett and others well-known in British cultural studies, I think we can conclude that Howitt is out of his depth in this area.

His review of the more traditional effects research is a little more comprehensive and fairly conventional. Concepts such as 'gatekeeping', the 'two-step flow of communication', 'selective perception, retention and recall' are briefly outlined in Chapter Three within the model which asks, 'Who says what to whom through what channel with what effects?' Chapter Four is entitled 'Psychological Theory in Mass Communications Research' and in ten pages runs through some of the approaches of this type. In this short treatment the reader is given a 'taste' of different approaches, including the physiologically-based notions of Emery and Emery (television-viewing blunts the higher mental processes) and psychoanalytic contributions, along with lines of research from experimental psychologies and social-psychologies. No detailed review of these positions is attempted and no overall conclusion other than that 'Psychology has contributed greatly to the discussion of the role of mass communications in society' (p. 37) is provided. Indeed we may agree that much of the discussion of media effects has been in psychological terms,

The Mass Media And Social Problems International Series In Experimental Social Psychology V :

The Mass Media & Social Problems D. Howitt, 2013-10-22 Discusses the way the mass media treats social problems its contribution to causing and curing social problems and its use by concerned organisations and groups wishing to act to reduce social problems It brings together a wide range of topics including racism sexism poverty violence pornography the educational disadvantaged and crime and justice The Social and Cultural Construction of Risk B.B. Johnson, V.T. Covello, 2012-12-06 The Social and Cultural Construction of Risk Issues Methods and Case Studies Vincent T Covello and Branden B Johnson Risks to health safety and the environment abound in the world and people cope as best they can But before action can be taken to control reduce or eliminate these risks decisions must be made about which risks are important and which risks can safely be ignored The challenge for decision makers is that consensus on these matters is often lacking Risks believed by some individuals and groups to be tolerable or acceptable such as the risks of nuclear power or industrial pollutants are intolerable and unacceptable to others This book addresses this issue by exploring how particular technological risks come to be selected for societal attention and action Each section of the volume examines from a different perspective how individuals groups communities and societies decide what is risky how risky it is and what should be done The writing of this book was inspired by another book Risk and Culture An Essay on the Selection of Technological and Environmental Dangers Published in 1982 and written by two distinguished scholars Mary Douglas a British social anthropologist and Aaron Wildavsky an American political scientist the book received wide critical attention and offered several provocative ideas on the nature of risk selection perception and acceptance Game Theory and Experimental Games Andrew M. Colman, 2016-06-06 Game Theory and Experimental Games The Study of Strategic Interaction focuses on the development of game theory taking into consideration empirical research theoretical formulations and research procedures involved The book proceeds with a discussion on the theory of one person games The individual decision that a player makes in these kinds of games is noted as influential as to the outcome of these games This discussion is followed by a presentation of pure coordination games and minimal situation The ability of players to anticipate the choices of others to achieve a mutually beneficial outcome is emphasized A favorable social situation is also influential in these kinds of games The text moves forward by presenting studies on various kinds of competitive games The research studies presented are coupled with empirical evidence and discussion designed to support the claims that are pointed out The book also discusses several kinds of approaches in the study of games Voting as a way to resolve multi person games is also emphasized including voting procedures the preferences of voters and voting strategies The book is a valuable source of data for readers and scholars who are interested in the exploration of game theories Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science Allen Kent, 1996-05-24 Supplement 21 Concept Based Indexing and Retrieval of Hypermedia Information to Using Self Checkout Technology to Increase Productivity and Patron Service in the Library The Social Development of the Intellect

W. Doise, G. Mugny, A. St. James, N. Emler, D. Mackie, 2013-10-22 The definition of intelligence has become the object of many controversies particularly about its nature and the causes of its development with essential social implications at stake To get out of this deadlock the authors of this book propose a social conception of intelligence and of its development they consider intelligence as resulting from the inter individual coordinations of actions and judgements They experimentally study how groups of children elaborate new cognitive tools which their members taken individually did not possess at the start and how these cognitive tools are subsequently used by the child alone List of Documents and Publications in the Field of Mass Communication Unesco, 1980

Attitudes & Social Adaptation L. R. Kahle, 2013-10-22 An important and interesting work which demonstrates the person situation interaction theory of attitudes and attributes and shows how many of the principles of interaction or attribute research apply to attitude research and vice versa A new theory social adaptation is presented which attempts to account for the importance of attitudes and social cognition in human social behaviour and applies Piaget's work on cognitive development to attitude research

Television Program Master Index Charles V. Dintrone, 1996

Television history has become one of the hottest areas of research in popular culture Because the field is relatively new and so wide ranging no matter what one is researching much of the relevant material will be found scattered through numerous other works frustrating scholarly progress This work makes the television researcher's job easier by providing a single index to 341 books that include information on 1 002 shows Most of the books deal exclusively with television though some autobiographies biographies Congressional hearings and works on communication and the media are also indexed For a show to be included it must have been carried on NBC CBS ABC or Fox and must have been a series Shows on PBS are generally not included though exceptions have been made for Sesame Street and Mister Rogers Neighborhood

Language and Action David D. Clarke, 2017-05-04 International Series in Experimental Social Psychology Volume 7 Language and Action A Structural Model of Behaviour presents studies that tackle human action relationship between key decisions and outcomes and the forces that give shape to events The book particularly focuses on the activity system of conversation The first chapter provides an introduction to and overview of the structural model of behavior Chapter 2 reviews several experiments concerning conversation structure Chapter 3 covers linguistic analogy while Chapter 4 provides an overview of the structure of discourse The fifth chapter discusses the theories and models of conversation structure Chapter 6 tackles the human aspects while Chapter 7 covers the applications The eighth chapter presents the conclusion which includes the evaluation of methods and theoretical issues The book will be of great interest psychologists psychiatrists and other scientists concerned with behavioral structure of conversation

Cultures in Contact Stephen Bochner, 2016-07-01 International Series in Experimental Social Psychology Volume I Culture in Contact Studies in Cross Cultural Interaction is part of a series of books that presents development in the field of social psychology each volume contains materials such as empirical research research procedures theoretical formulations and critical reviews of the relevant literature This particular volume covers the processes and outcomes of cross cultural encounters The book consists of eight chapters which are organized into three parts Part I discusses various types and purposes of cross cultural contact and reviews the major empirical findings relating to the field Part II deals with the processes underlying effective communication between culturally diverse persons Part III concerns itself with practical outcomes of culture contact such as the reactions of the persons engaged in the meeting The text will be of great interest to researchers and professionals concerned with the nature of cross cultural interactions such as sociologists and social psychologists
