

POST-WAR POVERTY

The best of new world war wounds hardly on our generation. Some areas are still suffering from the ravages of the most destructive upheaval in human history. In other parts of the world progress has been delayed. Problems of production, manpower, markets, employment—all these have been aggravated by war and post-war conditions. 1,400,000,000 people live in dire poverty. But figures such as this are too big to grasp. Only if you can picture these hundreds of millions in terms of single families does the drama of humanity begin to take on its real significance. Single out a hungry child, or study the face of its mother, and you catch the bitter glimpse of the struggle of world misery. Why is poverty the U.N.'s concern? . . . It is not enough to produce war and to suffer weapons. Economic necessity in any one country can threaten peace and security to others. The world is an entity in this respect.

That is why the United Nations works to promote higher standards of living and economic and social progress through the Economic and Social Council, U.N. Regional Commissions for Europe, Asia and the Far East and Latin America, working with the specialized agencies, and tackling the economic problems of these areas on the national level. Loans for reconstruction and industrial development, encouragement of labor standards, the passing of technical knowledge, and a far-reaching program of medicines to underdeveloped countries are examples of what the U.N. and its agencies are doing to remove the fear of want.
