intermediate and deep water processes and their interaction in time and space drive the major ocean circulation of the Mediterranean Sea. All major forcing mechanisms such as surface wind forcing, buoyancy fluxes, lateral mass exchange and deep convection determining the global oceanic circulation are present in this body of water. Deep and intermediate water masses are formed in different areas of the ocean layers and they drive the Mediterranean thermohaline cell which further shows important analogies with the global ocean conveyor belt.

The Mediterranean Sea: Temporal Variability and Spatial Patterns is a comprehensive volume that investigates the temporal and spatial variability patterns in the ocean basin. Volume highlights include:

- Discussions of state of the art physical and biogeochemical properties of the Mediterranean Sea.
- Multiple physical ocean circulation processes both in time and spatial scales: basin, sub-basin and mesoscale.
- How different regional phenomena in the sea influence the biogeochemistry of the basin and the ocean dynamics.
- Spatio-temporal variability of the surface circulation in the western Mediterranean.
- Deep water variability and inter-basin interactions in the eastern Mediterranean Sea.
- Understanding the link between global ocean circulation patterns and the global climate.

The Mediterranean Sea will be a valuable resource for geoscientists, oceanographers and meteorologists.

The Mediterranean

William Henry Smyth, 1854      The Physical Geography of the Mediterranean Jamie C. Woodward, 2009-05-07

This volume explores the climates, landscapes, ecosystems and hazards that comprise the Mediterranean world. It traces the development of the Mediterranean landscape over very long timescales and examines modern processes and key environmental issues in a wide range of settings. The Mediterranean is the only region on Earth where three continents meet and this interaction has produced a very distinctive Physical Geography. This book examines the landscapes and processes at the margins of these continents and the distinctive marine environment between them. Catastrophic earthquakes, explosive volcanic eruptions and devastating storms and floods are intimately bound up within the history and mythology of the Mediterranean world. This is a key region for the study of natural hazards because it offers unrivalled access to long records of hazard occurrence and impact through documentary, archaeological and geological archives. The Mediterranean is also a biodiversity hotspot; it has been a meeting place for plants, animals and humans from three continents throughout much of its history. The Quaternary records of these interactions are more varied and better preserved than in any other part of the world. These records have provided important new insights into the tempo of climate, landscape and ecosystem change in the Mediterranean region and beyond. The region is unique because of the very early and widespread impact of humans in landscape and ecosystem change and the richness of the archaeological and geological archives that chronicle this impact. This book examines this history and these interactions and places current environmental issues in long term context.
