Twice-Told Tales - The Complete Works of Nathaniel Hawthorne Nathaniel Hawthorne, 2008-10 INTRODUCTION

The early Chinese believed that jade had an immortality of its own and was impervious to decay. For them, there was no substance nobler, purer, more durable, more pre-eminently suitable for the fashioning of religious emblems and the embodiment of dogma. Round jade as round a kernel, the whole body of early Chinese civilisation crystallised. And yet they were not the first discoverers or users of jade; for the Babylonians made seal cylinders of jade, and Professor Elliott Smith believes that the Turkestan jade mountains and rivers were first worked by miners from Mesopotamia, who passing on legends about the magical qualities of jade, infected the Chinese with their beliefs. From the third millennium, he says, the mines on the S.E. of the Caspian were being exploited, and contact was established between Babylonians, Elamites, and the population of Turkestan. But however early the contacts assumed or established, we can state truthfully that the Chinese made jade particularly and everlastingly their own, embodying in it their traditions, their religion, their administrative system. They may have derived their belief in the life-giving properties of jade from the Elamites, or have come to attach a magical value to its presence from the Babylonian miners; but for neither of these peoples was it the vehicle of supernatural beliefs, and penetrate as far back as we may into pre-history, we cannot find a time in China in which jade was not used for religious purposes. What perhaps emphasises the peculiar position of jade in Chinese culture is the fact that other early peoples used jade, although for them it had no significance greater or even as great as gold or pearls. Jade was dug and worked in many parts of Europe. Hatchets have been found in Switzerland, nephrite celts in South Italy and France, Germany, Dalmatia, and Hungary. Jade celts too were discovered by Schliemann at Hissarlik, but by no people save the Chinese has jade been made the nucleus and the shrine of a civilisation, although its use was distributed in Turkestan, Persia, Siberia, India, Lake Baikal, and Japan, and to a minor degree the substance was prized by most Asiatic peoples. It is only during the last two decades that collectors have begun to realise the enormous importance of jade. Dr. Laufer broke new ground when in 1912 he published his great work, A Study in Chinese Archaeology and Religion. His object in writing this book was rather ethnological than artistic. He himself calls it a contribution to the Anthropology Encyclopedia Britannica.
