Evaluating New Technologies Paul Solie, Marcus Düwell, 2009-04-03

human practices How are we to morally evaluate technology developments that have open horizons encompass uncertainties and lack control Technology is in uential on society technological innovations act upon the perception of ourselves the world and our relation with fellow humans and other objects Technology is changing everything we do by creating new entities such as software nanop ticles or Internet by changing the scale of activities e g vast amounts of data about people can be stored and analysed and not infrequently without people ing aware of this by generating new kinds of knowledge for instance about i nesses the human genome and so on Technologies as a consequence impinge upon our morality and for this reason an ethics of technology should not wait passively until moral problems arise and not only focus on identi ed and exi ing moral problems but contemplate technology developments and possible paths proactively However this is easier said than done because a prospective and proactive evaluation of technology developments is complicated by complexity and uncertainty The uncertainty of technology development is closely related to one of the striking features of technology namely what Jim Moor has coined logical malleability 1985 269 Technological devices are logically malleable in that they can be shaped to do any activity that can be characterised in terms of logical operations Science and Technology for Development ,1979
