Technology In Hospitals:

Technology in Hospitals Louise B. Russell, 1979 Abstract New technologies do contribute to rising hospital costs. However, the primary component of rising expenditures is the result of increased insurance benefits and third party payers. Case studies and statistical methods are combined to present new technologies of the past 25 years in the context of the flow of resources into medical care. Technologies considered include intensive care, respiratory therapy, diagnostic radioisotopes, the electroencephalograph, open heart surgery, cobalt therapy, and renal dialysis. Dilemmas posed by new medical technologies in the United States, Sweden, Great Britain, and France are examined. The best answer to slowing rising costs will be a mixture of policies on rationing resources. The two possibilities for constraint are 1) and aggregate limit on total resources as through a national budget for medical care and 2) coinsurance for medical care in which the patient pays some fraction of the cost, usually depending on income.

Healthcare Technology Management Systems Rossana Rivas, Luis Vilcahuamán, 2017-07-17 Healthcare Technology Management Systems provides a model for implementing an effective healthcare technology management (HTM) system in hospitals and healthcare provider settings as well as promoting a new analysis of hospital organization for decision making regarding technology. Despite healthcare complexity and challenges, current models of management and organization of technology in hospitals still have evolved over those established 40-50 years ago according to totally different circumstances and technologies available now. The current health context based on new technologies demands working with an updated model of management and organization which requires a re-engineering perspective to achieve appropriate levels of clinical effectiveness, efficiency, safety, and quality. Healthcare Technology Management Systems presents best practices for implementing procedures for effective technology management focused on human resources as well as aspects related to liability and the appropriate procedures for implementation. Presents a new model for hospital organization for Clinical Engineers and administrators to implement Healthcare Technology Management (HTM). Understand how to implement Healthcare Technology Management (HTM) and Health Technology Assessment (HTA) within all types of organizations including Human Resource impact, Technology Policy and Regulations, Health Technology Planning (HTP) and Acquisition as well as Asset and Risk Management. Transfer of knowledge from applied research in CE, HTM, HTP, and HTA from award-winning authors who are active in international health organizations such as the World Health Organization (WHO), Pan American Health Organization (PAHO), American College of Clinical Engineering (ACCE), and International Federation for Medical and Biological Engineering (IFMBE).

Technology in the Hospital Joel D. Howell, 1995-06 How did use of medical technology such as urinalyses blood tests and x ray machines change patient care in early twentieth century American hospitals To what extent was the use of new machines influenced by the ideas of scientific medicine and to what extent by the availability of newly structured facilities and trained personnel Drawing on the medical treatment of more than 2 000 patients in Pennsylvania and New York hospitals Howell traces the ways in which medical technology was used not merely how it was talked about He utilizes a wide range of sources including medical texts popular literature and the visual arts to explore how technology came to be such a central feature of medical care Howell also shows how changes in medical practice raised issues of gender culture and economics Howell's analysis is especially timely in light of the ongoing debate over U S health care reform a debate in which a central topic is the use and expense of medical technology In a concluding chapter he applies the book's historical insights to medical practice today asking why for example modern diagnostic tests have not been used to give doctors more time to spend with patients

Hospital-Based Health Technology Assessment Laura

Sampietro-Colom, Janet Martin, 2017-01-23 A timely work describing how localized hospital based health technology assessment HB HTA complements general arms length HTA agency efforts and what has been the collective global impact of HB HTA across the globe While HB HTA has gained significant momentum over the past few years expertise in the field and information on the operation and organization of HB HTA has been scattered This book serves to bring this information together to inform those who are currently working in the field of HTA at the hospital regional national or global level In addition this book is intended for decision makers and policy makers with a stake in determining the uptake and decommissioning of new and established technologies in the hospital setting HTA has traditionally been performed at the National Regional level by HTA Agencies typically linked to governments Yet hospitals are the main entry door for most health technologies HTs Hospital decision makers must undertake multiple high stakes investment and disinvestment decisions annually for innovative HTs usually without adequate information Despite the existence of arms length HTA Agencies inadequate information is available to hospital decision makers either because relevant HTA reports are not yet released at the time of entry of new technologies to the field or because even when the report exists the information contained is insufficient to clarify the contextualized informational needs of hospital decision makers Therefore there has recently been a rising trend toward hospital based HTA units and programs These units programs complement the work of National Regional HTA Agencies by providing the key and relevant evidence needed by hospital decision makers in their specific hospital context and within required decision making timelines The emergence of HB HTA is creating a comprehensive HTA ecosystem across health care levels which creates better bridges for knowledge translation through relevance and timeliness
