

Muslims are not expected to mix freely with people who take faith as a joke or belittle it. If we see evil in any situation and are able to do something about putting it right, then it is our duty to act in the best way we can. If we cannot do anything to help or improve the situation, it is better to withdraw and keep apart.

“Leave alone those who take their religion as play and amusement and whom the worldly life has deceived. And remind (them) of it in case a soul should be delivered to ruin because of that which it has earned...”

(Surah Al-An’am 6:70)

Islam is such a demanding way of life that it is natural that we Muslims find our support, affection and kindred feeling amongst other Muslims – regardless of national origin, language or cultural habits. We provide each other with encouragement for living in Islam and act as deterrent for deviating from it.

“And the believing men and the believing women are protecting friends to one another. They command what is right and forbid what is wrong and they establish the salat and produce the zakat and they obey Allah and His Messenger.” (Surah Al-Tawba 9:71)

Friends should stick together and care for each other. We cannot call ourselves real friends if we do not pay attention when our friends are suffering.
