Abstract. The evolution of behavior of dermatology patients has seen significantly accelerated change over the past decade, driven by surging availability and adoption of digital tools and platforms. Through our longitudinal analysis of this behavior within Tunisia over a 35-year time frame, we identify behavioral patterns across economic and cultural dimensions and how digital tools have impacted those patterns in preceding years. Throughout this work, we highlight the witnessed effects of available digital tools as experienced by patients, and conclude by presenting a vision for how future tools can help address the issues identified across economic and cultural manifestations. Our analysis is further framed around three types of digital tools: “Dr. Google”, social media, and artificial intelligence (AI) tools, and across three stages of clinical care: pre-visit, in-visit, and post-visit.

Keywords: Dermatology, e-Health technology, reverse image search, social media groups, AI tools.

1 Introduction

In this accelerating and expanding digital age, information technologies and image processing techniques have thrown us into an inevitable “iconosphere” whose psychological, epistemological, and cultural impacts are undeniable [13]. Amongst the various industries where the digital age has transformed the respective processes, products, and services, healthcare has significantly lagged all other industries despite it having the greatest potential, both in terms of the ability to fundamentally improve the delivery of care as well as the overall impact of that to civilization. Despite the connectivity potential and advanced digitization in this new age, patients are still at the mercy of inaccessibility to accurate clinical care in a timely or convenient manner. The potential transformative impact

Tiresias Mikhail Iampolski presents the first sustained attempt to develop a theory of cinematic intertextuality Building on the insights of semiotics and contemporary film theory Iampolski defines cinema as a chain of transparent mimetic fragments intermixed with quotations he calls textual anomalies These challenge the normalization of meaning and seek to open reading out onto the unlimited field of cultural history which is understood in texts as a semiotically active extract already inscribed Quotations obstruct mimesis and are consequently transformed in the process of semiosis an operation that Iampolski defines as reading in an aura of enigma In a series of brilliant analyses of films by D W Griffith Sergei Eisenstein and Luis Buñuel he presents different strategies of intertextual reading in their work His book suggests the continuing centrality of semiotic analysis and is certain to interest film historians and theorists as well as readers in cultural and literary studies

Poetry, Politics, and Culture Harold Kaplan, 2017-07-05 A salient feature of modern poetics is its direct connection with cultural history and politics Among the great American poets of the twentieth century Wallace Stevens and William Carlos Williams offer a significant contrast with T S Eliot and Ezra Pound Where the latter advocated a theocentric or reactionary response to the cultural crises of modernity the former affirmed an essentially humanist and democratic social and aesthetic ethos In Poetry Politics and Culture Harold Kaplan offers a penetrating comparative study of these representative and distinctively influential poets

All four poets wrote in an atmosphere of cultural crisis following World War I caught as they were between outmoded belief systems and various forms of artistic and political nihilism While each believed in poetry as a source of cultural values and beliefs they nevertheless experienced loss of confidence in their own vocation in a world characterized by scientific rationalist thinking and the mundane struggle for survival For each therefore the poetic imagination was a means of restoring order or building a new civilization out of chaos In trying to define a revitalized culture the four exemplified the perennial quarrel between Europe and America
