rhyming style is delightful The stories are not only entertaining but they also carry some subtle messages to those children fortunate enough to read them or have them read to them The books are enhanced by one of the top illustrator artists of the day Abira Das always a welcome sight when reading new stories It is the winter season and what better way to introduce customs from around the world than to have a story about a snowman Sigal introduces children who build the snowman and the snowman speaks to his creators especially grateful for his carrot nose At night the children go to their homes leaving the snowman alone and one day when the snowman awakens his carrot nose is gone When the children discover the missing part they give the snowman a new carrot nose Again at night the snowman wants to stay awake to assure his nose remains in place He sees a little bunny The bunny pleads for a snowman s nose to feed his family who are hungry in the wintertime In friendship the snowman gives us his nose every night And everyday it is replaced so the food chain remains intact Until summer and the snowman of course is no longer The bunny keeps track of the time and come wintertime again he meets p with his old friend the new snowman A fun wintertime story with a solid message beautifully illustrated and Sigal Adler successfully adds to her repertoire of fine children s books Grady Harp A carrot nose and the spirit of giving This children s book is beautifully illustrated in the spirit of the season with rolling hills of snow sparkling snowflakes and glittering lights reflecting the images conjured by the writing In one tiny village all glowing with light A very grand snowman stood guard day and night Surrounded by cute children who fit a carrot nose in the middle of its face the snowman feels deserted when they must leave for the night But when nighttime fell the snowman would groan For the children must leave and he d be all alone We can all learn from this snowman from his spirit of giving When he spots a hungry bunny he offers his nose to him Uvi Poznansky
