Technology And Competitiveness In Mexico An Industrial Perspective:

Technology and Competitiveness in Mexico Thomas J. Botzman, 1999-05-13 Technology and Competitiveness in Mexico examines Mexico's efforts to transform from Third World to First World economic status as international trade agreements are signed and many closed economies open. Thomas J. Botzman explores this process by consolidating scholarly literature on Mexican technological development including that published since the foreign reserve crisis and the subsequent devaluation of the peso in 1994. He discusses the technology transfer practices and industrial transformation as routes to international competitiveness in the manufacturing sector, an accepted key to economic growth and development while highlighting the strengths and weaknesses of industrial development in Mexico. Botzman seeks to provide a benchmark for the study of modern technology development and competitiveness of Mexican industry through a greater understanding of the cooperative linkages that need to be formed between academia, government and private industry using case studies of the automobile, textile, chemical and steel industries. Figueiredo, 2024-02-20 Innovation, Competitiveness and Development in Latin America provides a balanced and topical analysis of the successes and failures of development policy in post-war Latin America. Across nineteen chapters, experts in the economics and policy of Latin American development and policy identify the challenges at hand. They explore why the region is caught in a middle income trap where structural impediments frustrate the achievement of accelerated and sustainable growth. At the same time, potential actions are suggested for creating lasting progress. With fresh insights grounded in the reality of modern-day Latin America, this book offers scholars and professionals a crucial window into Latin America's long-term developmental trajectory. The Mexico Competitiveness Report 2009, Competitiveness and Development Mehdi Shafaeddin, 2012-09-15 In Competitiveness and Development, the author explains the confusion surrounding the concept of competitiveness in the context of developing countries, proposes policies for achieving competitiveness at a high level of development, examines its possibilities and constraints, and suggests policy changes necessary at the national and international levels. Shafaeddin illustrates how developed countries impose restrictive policies on developing countries through international financial institutions and the WTO, as well as regional and bilateral agreements which limit their policy space for promoting dynamic comparative advantage in order to achieve competitiveness.
