

Topic: The Canterbury Tales

Presenter: Sherwin Delgado

A. About the presenter

The reporter's diction was classy and the discussion was thorough; I suppose they are practicing well with this report. The presentation was helpful; however, I think the fonts could be adjusted because they seem a little odd and hard to read. The PPT, the video, and the soft copy of the story were all provided by the presenter, which made the resources useful for gathering data for the analysis.

B. Literary Analysis

I. Introduction

"The Canterbury Tales," a classic piece of English writing, shows how great Geoffrey Chaucer was at telling stories and observing things. This collection of stories, which was written in 1387–1400, shows how big and complicated English society was in that time.

Setting Chaucer's works in the late Middle Ages helps us understand the social and cultural atmosphere of that time. The fourteenth century was marked by pestilence, political unrest, and the growth of the middle class. "The Canterbury Tales" takes place between the High Middle Ages and the Renaissance and shows how complicated it is for a society to change. A lot of people connect Chaucer's writing to the Middle English era, which was a time when the language was changing between the Old and Modern English styles.

This analysis will look at different aspects of Chaucer's writing style in the story, focusing on how the tales of the pilgrims present a mirror image of the complicated nature of medieval society. This study will argue that Chaucer uses the pilgrimage theme to make a social remark, focusing on the good and bad qualities of different social classes and individuals by looking closely at themes, characters, and the structure of the story. It will also look at ethics, satire, and the search for identity in the setting of pilgrimage as a small version of society as a whole.

II. Plot Summary

The story of "The Canterbury Tales" is about a group of travelers who meet at the Tabard Inn in Southwark before starting their journey to the shrine at Canterbury, where Thomas Becket is honored. As a break from the problems they're having, the travelers hold a contest for the best story. Harry Bailey, the host, asks each traveler to tell two stories from the trip to Canterbury and two stories from the trip back. When they get back, the traveler with the most interesting story will get free food.

The stories cover a wide range of topics and writing styles, showing how different the pilgrims were and giving us a look into the social structure of medieval England. "The Miller's Tale" is a satirical and funny tale; "The Wife of Bath's Tale" is about women's rights and marriage; "The Pardoner's Tale" is about greed and immorality; and "The Knight's Tale" is about a perfect love story.

The main struggle in the story is not about what happens in the story itself, but about how the pilgrims behave morally and socially. Instead of having a single main story, the
