The Learning Disabled Child J. Jeffries McWhirter, 1988

Developmental-Behavioral Disorders Marvin I. Gottlieb, John E. Williams, 2013-03-07 Child development has always been a traditional component of well child care and a particular area of interest for pediatricians child neurologists and psychologists However it was not until the early 1960s that children with developmental disabilities i e chronic handicapping disorders became a major focus of public and professional attention During this period children with special needs were dramatically catapulted into the limelight and exceptional became the buzzword of the day Public and professional awareness of these issues reached new peaks and recognition of the potential psychosocial impairments of children with developmental disabilities created national anxiety A variety of factors contributed to an unprecedented societal advocacy for children with developmental problems 1 a national concern generated by President Kennedy's particular interest in mental retardation 2 increased activity and visibility of parent advocacy lobbying groups e g the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities 3 the enactment of federal legislation designed to protect the rights of the handicapped e g PL94-142 and 4 the popularization of developmental behavioral disabilities by the various communications media Cumulatively these events precipitated a redefinition of the meaning of comprehensive health care for children resulting in an emphasis on the child's neurodevelopmental educational psychological and social needs For the pediatrician a myriad of new management responsibilities were mandated in addition to the traditional health care concerns

Parents and Families of Students With Special Needs Vicki A. McGinley, Melina Alexander, 2017-01-05 Parents and Families of Students With Special Needs

Collaborating Across the Age Span teaches students the skills they need to effectively collaborate with parents and families to ensure a child's success in the classroom Authors Vicki A McGinley and Melina Alexander's text takes a lifespan approach with a special emphasis on the critical transition points in a child's life Information is provided on what can be seen at each stage of an individual with disabilities development and addresses concerns and needs that families may have during these unique phases of growth Chapters written by professors and professionals who are also parents of students with special needs bring a diverse range of voices into the narrative The authors provide an in-depth discussion of how parents and families are affected by particular disabilities family system theory the laws that affect individuals with disabilities and assessments for individuals with disabilities
