Knock
Knock

Billy Brown is a seventeen-year-old who has finished his first term at school. He has to start a new job, looking for lodgings. He comes across a beautiful house and feels strongly attracted to the sign saying "Bed and Breakfast".

It's all ready for you, my dear!

I was wondering about a room!

When he steps the doorstep, it is everything he needs for a double night. Certainly, some breakfast that his "boarding" mother is just every thing, and then the woman's excellent manners and pleasant, warm, old-fashioned and this one is all yours. Here's your room. I do hope you'll like it!

Thank you, thank you ever so much.

The lady tells him the room rules. He is less than half what he was prepared to pay. Billy decides to stay. She tells him that he is the only guest so she takes him to his room.

Very well then, I'll leave you now so that you can unpack. But before you go to bed, would you be kind enough to pop into the sitting room at the ground floor.

I think I'll just go to bed as soon as possible because tomorrow I've got to get up rather early and report to the office.

The woman is very kind. She tells him that she is a widow and that her husband died of a heart attack. She tells him that she is a widow and that her husband died of a heart attack. She tells him that she is a widow and that her husband died of a heart attack.

You really shouldn't bother. I don't mean you to do anything like that.

Come over here now, dear and sit down beside me on the sofa and I'll give you a nice cup of tea and ginger biscuits before you go to bed.

From the friendly person Billy's tea with sugar and intends to stuff his cap, so she has already done so. He takes him to his room.
