Into Africa, Out of Academia Kwan Kew Lai, 2020-10-22 In 2006 Kwan Kew Lai left her full time position as a professor in the United States to provide medical humanitarian aid to the remote villages and the war torn areas of Africa. This memoir follows her experiences from 2006 to 2013 as she provided care during the HIV AIDs epidemics after natural disasters and as a relief doctor in refugee camps in Kenya, Libya, Uganda and in South Sudan where civil war virtually wiped out all existing healthcare facilities. Throughout her memoir, Lai recounts intimate encounters with refugees and internally displaced people in camps and in hospitals with limited resources, telling tales of their resilience, unflinching courage and survival through extreme hardship. Her writing provides insight into communities and transports readers to heart aching beautiful parts of Africa not frequented by the usual travelers. This is a deeply personal account of the huge disparities in the healthcare system of our global village and is a call to action for readers to understand the interconnectedness of the modern world, the needs of less developed neighbors and the shortcomings of their healthcare systems.

Sentience Nicholas Humphrey, 2022 We feel, therefore we are. Conscious sensations ground our sense of self. They are essential to our idea of ourselves as psychic beings present, existent and mattering. But is it only humans who feel this way? Do other animals? Will future machines? To answer these questions, we need a scientific understanding of consciousness: what it is and why it has evolved. Nicholas Humphrey has been researching these issues for fifty years. In this extraordinary book, weaving together intellectual adventure, cutting edge science and his own breakthrough experiences, he tells the story of his quest to uncover the evolutionary history of consciousness, from his discovery of blindsight after brain damage in monkeys to hanging out with mountain gorillas in Rwanda to becoming a leading philosopher of mind. Out of this, he has come up with an explanation of conscious feeling, phenomenal consciousness that he presents here in full for the first time. Building on this theory of how phenomenal consciousness is generated in the human brain, he turns to the morally crucial question of whether it exists in non-human creatures. His conclusions on the evidence as it stands are radical. Contrary to both popular and much scientific opinion, he argues that phenomenal consciousness is a relatively recent evolutionary innovation, present only in warm-blooded creatures: mammals and birds. Invertebrates such as octopuses and bees, for all their intelligence, are in this respect unfeeling zombies. And for now, but not necessarily for ever, so are man-made machines.

Nature's Saviours Graham Huggan, 2013-08-22 Today's celebrity conservationists, many of whom made their reputations through television and other visual media, play a major role in drawing public attention to an increasingly threatened world This book one of the first to address this contribution focuses on five key figures the English naturalist David Attenborough the French marine adventurer Jacques Yves Cousteau the American primatologist Dian Fossey the Canadian scientist broadcaster activist David Suzuki and the Australian crocodile hunter Steve Irwin Some of the issues the author addresses include What is the changing relationship between western conservation and celebrity How has the spread of television helped shape and mediate this relationship To what extent can celebrity conservation be seen as part of a global system in which conservation like celebrity is big business The book critically examines the heroic status accorded to the five figures mentioned above taking in the various discourses around nature science nation gender through which they and their work have been presented to us In doing so it fills in the cultural historical and ideological background behind contemporary celebrity conservationism as a popular expression of a chronically endangered world

Primitive Passions Marianna Torgovnick,1998-10 In this provocative and illuminating book Marianna Torgovnick explores the psychology of our profound attraction to cultures we call primitive Whether located in Africa the South Pacific or the American Southwest the primitive has become synonymous in the Western imagination with a range of emotions and experiences thought to be lost in modern life reverence for the land and for nature strong communal bonds sexual plentitude and perhaps most intriguing and ecstatic sense of connection to the universe and the life force Torgovnick investigates the numerous ways we have turned toward the primitive out of spiritual hunger for such deeply human experiences a hunger that could once be satisfied within the West s own mystical traditions but that often no longer can be Brilliantly encompassing religion art psychology literature and other aspects of our culture Primitive Passions offers new insight into our ideas of spirituality and gender and ultimately into the hidden but vital parts of ourselves

Centralizing Fieldwork Jeremy MacClancy,Agustín Fuentes,2010-12-01 Fieldwork is a central method of research throughout anthropology a much valued much vaunted mode of generating information But its nature and process have been seriously understudied in biological anthropology and primatology This book is the first ever comparative investigation across primatology biological anthropology and social anthropology to look critically at this key research practice It is also an innovative way to further the comparative project within a broadly conceived anthropology because it does not focus on common theory but on a common method The questions asked by contributors are what in the pursuit of fieldwork is common to all three disciplines what is unique to each how much is contingent how much necessary Can we generate well grounded cross disciplinary generalizations about this mutual research method and are there any telling differences Co edited by a social anthropologist and a primatologist the book includes a list of distinguished and well established contributors from primatology and biological anthropology

Made From This Earth Vera Norwood,2014-07-01 The broad sweep of environmental and ecological history has until now been written and understood in predominantly male terms In Made From This Earth Vera Norwood explores the relationship of women to the natural environment through the work of writers illustrators landscape and garden designers ornithologists botanists biologists and conservationists Norwood begins by showing that the study and promotion of botany was an activity deemed appropriate for women in the early 1800s After highlighting the work of nineteenth century scientific illustrators and garden designers she focuses on nature s advocates such as Rachel Carson and Dian Fossey who differed strongly with men on both women s nature and the value of the natural world These women challenged the dominant male controlled ideologies often framing their critique with reference to values arising from the female experience Norwood concludes with an analysis of the utopian solutions posed by ecofeminists the most recent group of women to contest men over the meaning and value of nature

A Reenchanted World James William Gibson,2009-04-14 A surprising and enlightening investigation of how modern society is making nature sacred once again For more than two centuries Western cultures as they became ever more industrialized increasingly regarded the natural world as little more than a collection of useful raw resources The folklore of powerful forest spirits and mountain demons was displaced by the practicalities of logging and strip mining the traditional rituals of hunting ceremonies gave way to the indiscriminate butchering of animals for meat markets In the famous lament of Max Weber our surroundings became disenchanted with nature s magic swept away by secularization and rationalization But now as acclaimed sociologist James William Gibson reveals in this insightful study the culture of enchantment is making an astonishing comeback From Greenpeace eco warriors to evangelical Christians preaching creation care and geneticists who speak of human animal kinship Gibson finds a remarkably broad yearning for a spiritual reconnection to nature As we grapple with increasingly dire environmental disasters he points to this cultural shift as the last utopian dream the final hope for protecting the world that all of us must live in
