Splintered Bones:

Prehistoric Warfare on the Great Plains P. Willey, 2022-03-26 First Published in 1991 This study is the product of the discovery excavation processing data collection and analysis of nearly 500 human skeletons from the Crow Creek Massacre Project South Dakota In about 1325 AD nearly 500 American Indians were massacred and their remains were discovered excavated and cleaned in 1978 The general purpose of the Crow Creek osteological study were to describe the remains as fully as time permitted and compare these results with other samples This volume presents information concerning the Crow Creek bone elements paleodemography cranial affiliations mutilations and stature It emphasizes the unique feature of the sample and compares the Crow Creek sample with other skeletal samples from the Plains From These Bare Bones

Alice Choyke, Sonia O'Connor, 2013-12-19 A fundamental component of the study of worked osseous objects is the identification of the raw materials chosen to make them In archaeological contexts many objects become degraded to the point where identification is very difficult and the way in which these materials decay during burial and upon excavation can vary greatly Correct identification is crucial to the investigation of objects their conservation and future curation Above all understanding raw material selection aids our understanding of human animal interaction in the past both on pragmatic and symbolic levels since the choices made by artisans vary by cultural tradition as well as availability The 20 papers presented here explore a wealth of information pertaining to the use of osseous materials over the long period of human craftsmanship and tool manufacture by exploring several key themes Raw material selection and curation within tool types Social aspects of raw material selection New methods of materials identification It is demonstrated that the issue of raw material identification has numerous implications for conservation work reproduction of objects the physical characteristics of the tool or ornament availability of raw materials the materials chosen for procurement and the cultural reasons that lie behind the choice of raw materials from particular species and skeletal elements to produce planned tool and ornament types Together these papers emphasize the need for confident and correct materials identification and demonstrate that functionality is by no means the only nor necessarily the most important factor in the selection of osseous raw materials for the fabrication of tools and other cultural objects Archeology of the John H. Kerr Reservoir Basin, Roanoke River, Virginia-North Carolina Carl Frederick Miller, Lucile E. Hoyme, William M. Bass, 1962
