

Therefore, it can be said that the appropriate size of a Mongolian general corpus is between 39 and 42 million.

6. CONCLUSION

In order to predict the appropriate size of the Mongolian general corpus, this study composed a sample corpus of 906,664 tokens in 10 Mongolian language domains. Two Heaps' functions were estimated using the composed sample corpus. The first Heaps' function was estimated after arranging the number of types for each 10 domains in order from the largest to the smallest. The first Heaps' function's α was 26.31101 and β was 0.52054. The second Heaps' function was estimated after discriminating only the written and spoken domain and randomly arranging the rest. The second Heaps' function's α was 35.40312 and β was 0.5442.

The values of F and TTR were estimated while increasing N by a million units using the estimated two Heaps' functions. As a result, in the case of Heaps' function 1, when N is 42 million, and in the case of Heaps' function 2, when N is 39 million, the change in TTR starts to become less than 0.0001. Therefore, this study concludes that the appropriate size of a Mongolian general corpus is between 39 and 42 million.

The above results are valid results only in the present study based on the sample corpus used in this study. Therefore, the results of studies using other sample corpus may come out differently. However, it is meaningful that this study presented an example of the appropriate size of the Mongolian general corpus. In the future, we expect to draw more elaborate conclusions by using more diverse functions based on various sample corpus.
