Honest Hour William G. Ross, 2014-06-30 The Honest Hour William G. Ross, 1996 In The Honest Hour Ross explains how to formulate ethical standards for time based billing Tapping a broad range of sources including judicial opinions rules of professional conduct the recent ABA opinion on hourly billing fee agreements bar journals law reviews personal interviews and nationwide surveys of hundreds of private practitioners and an inside counsel that he conducted in 1991 and from 1994 to 1995 Ross shows how members of the business and legal communities view the propriety of various billing practices Ross also evaluates the magnitude of unethical billing drawing on his surveys the experiences of legal audit firms and anecdotes Although he concludes that overbilling is widespread he contends that most attorneys try to bill their clients ethically and that much overbilling is the result of excessive zeal rather than fraud He also explains how clarification and reform of billing practices could help to improve the public image of attorneys and stimulate greater public service by lawyers The Honest Hour discusses how attorneys and their clients can work together to develop fee agreements that will permit attorneys to spend enough time to produce quality work while guarding against practices that exploit clients The book also covers the merits and disadvantages of various alternatives of hourly billing and the reactions of clients and lawyers to their experiences with such alternatives The book is intriguing and provocative It is intended as a text for professional responsibility classes and law practicums where it can serve as an excellent resource for initiating discussions Managing partners in house counsel legal auditors and corporate clients also will find this book useful when examining billing practices and alternatives Legal Information ALERT You have the leading academic expert in the country on this subject in Bill Ross he is really in the forefront Bill s surveys are right on Everything I ve seen since I started back in 1987 says they re about right James Schratz Schratz and Associates in The Birmingham News
