Charles S. Cockell

The Institutions Of Art:

The Institutions of Art Peter Bürger, Christa Bürger, 1992-01-01 Art has been an umbrella term for poetry music dance sculpture painting and architecture since the end of the eighteenth century when the bourgeoisie were establishing their hegemony over culture and politics in Germany labor was becoming more clearly divided and religion was losing its unifying force Art became a broad and separate entity as the expectations and experience of it changed The Institutions of Art concentrates on German and French literature in illustrating the formation of aesthetic autonomy and the divergence between high and popular culture Peter Bürger builds on his earlier Theory of the Avant Garde 1984 pushing further into key theoretical questions about art and society Christa Bürger extends the critique to the history of the novel focusing on Goethe and Kleist Looking backward to feudalism and forward to our century the authors show how the function of art has changed along with the criteria for its production and evaluation

The New Institutional Theory of Art David Graves, 2010 Question What do all works of art have in common Answer They are all products of a major cultural institution called The Artworld Question Is this what makes them art Answer Yes The New

Institutional Theory of Art is a different kind of theory about art. The theory is capable of explaining how it is that a urinal offered up by Marcel Duchamp and a statue of Moses offered up by Michelangelo are both works of art and under precisely the same terms. Together with this, the theory can also explain why it is that Michelangelo's work is magnificent whereas Duchamp's is interesting at best. By focusing not on the works of art themselves but rather upon the complex social cultural context of their creation and presentation, the New Institutional Theory provides fresh, clear, and powerful explanations of the very inner workings of Art writ large. The artists, the public, the issues, the techniques, the bothers, and the worries are all illuminated for the reader to gain true insight into the actual logic of Art. This book is intended for all readers, professionals and non-professionals alike. Journal of the Society of Arts, 1903
