

THE CONFIDENT MESSAGE

And he shall be that a sign
 And he a witness unto thee
 That he knoweth the land of Egypt: that they shall say unto the Lord because of this appearance, and he shall send them a sign, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

IN every mile of the land of what was once called Egypt, in the very center of that earth, as we speak such, on the exact dividing line between the Northern and Southern hemispheres, stands, ever a virtually immortal star, a yellow-gold monument in stone, known as the Star of the World's Seven Wonders, the Great Pyramid called Cheops, central figure of the three-pyramidal group known as "The Great Group."

At midday, exactly, the golden index finger of this Great Pyramid points directly to the overhead sun, and by the distance of this finger from the base of the Great Pyramid the exact distance of the sun from the earth is ascertained. With equal solemnity, the passage of entrance into this Great Pyramid points at that exact place in the heavens where, in the year 1910 B. C., as we speak time, the first trail star of the Constellation Serpens, or Draco, which was also the Star Star, or Star of the North, shone, and signaling the removal of which from its heavenly position at that date, the First Manichee Builders of the World directed the Northern Hemisphere of their temple to this day.

At exact midday, with pyramidal accuracy, this golden index finger points at that place in the heavens where, at midday of the autumnal equinox of that year which the Great Pyramid declares to be its birth year, appeared, the "star" star of the Constellation Hercules, who was Hercules.
