- This map of Roman Britain illustrates the extensive network of military roads and forts. The legend identifies three types of features: solid red lines for 'Wade military roads', dashed black lines for 'Caulfeild and later military roads', red dots for 'Wade Fort', and purple dots for 'Later Fort'. The Wade roads form a central, interconnected grid, while the Caulfeild roads form a more peripheral network. Numerous forts are marked across the island, with a high concentration in the central and southern regions. A scale bar at the bottom right indicates distances in Kilometres (0, 20, 40, 60, 80, 100).
