Voices in the Kitchen Meredith E. Abarca, 2006 Literally chilaquiles are a breakfast I grew up eating fried corn tortillas with tomato chile sauce Symbolically they are the culinary metaphor for how working class women speak with the seasoning of their food from the Introduction Through the ages and across cultures women have carved out a domain in which their cooking allowed them to express themselves strengthen family relationships and create a world of shared meanings with other women In Voices in the Kitchen Meredith E Abarca features the voices of her mother and several other family members and friends seated at their kitchen tables to share the grassroots world view of these working class Mexican and Mexican American women In the kitchen Abarca demonstrates women assert their own saz n seasoning not only in their cooking but also in their lives Through a series of oral histories or charlas culinarias culinary chats the women interviewed address issues of space sensual knowledge artistic and narrative expression and cultural and social change From her mother s breakfast chilaquiles to the most elaborate traditional dinner these women share their lives as they share their savory symbolic and theoretical meanings of food The charlas culinarias represent spoken personal narratives testimonial autobiography and a form of culinary memoir one created by the cooks as writers who speak from their kitchen space Abarca then looks at writers as cooks to add an additional dimension to the understanding of women s power to define themselves Voices in the Kitchen joins the extensive culinary research of the last decade in exploring the importance of the knowledge found in the practical concrete and temporal aspects of the ordinary practice of everyday cooking Shared Knowledge, Shared Power Veysel Apaydin, 2017-11-20 This volume brings together the experiences and research of heritage practitioners archaeologists and educators to explore new and unique approaches to heritage studies The last several decades have witnessed a rapid increase in the field of cultural heritage studies worldwide This increase in the number of studies and in interest by the public as well as academics has effected substantial change in the understanding of heritage and approaches to heritage studies This change has also impacted the perception of communities how to study and protect the physical residues of heritage and how to share the knowledge of heritage It has brought the issue of who has knowledge and how the value of heritage can be shared more effectively with communities who then ascribe meaning and value to heritage materials Heritage studies until a few decades ago exclusively studied the material culture of the past as part of elitist approaches that completely neglected communities rights to knowledge of their own heritage Additionally heritage practitioners and archaeologists neither shared this knowledge nor engaged with communities about their heritage Communities were also mostly deprived from contributing to heritage and archaeological studies This kind of top down approach was quite common in many parts of the world But recent studies and research in the field have shown the importance of including the public in projects and that sharing the knowledge produced through heritage studies and archaeological works is significant for the protection and preservation of heritage materials it has finally been understood that excluding the public from heritage is not ethical This publication presents a wide array of case studies with different approaches and methods from many parts of the world to answer these questions

Outsiders Or Equals? Tanya Fitzgerald, 2009 Shortlisted for the Anne Bloomfield Prize 2010 Across the ninety years of its history the University of New Zealand 1871 1961 appointed four women professors to the academic staff From the outset while the woman professor was an insider to the Academy based on her qualifications and professional credentials on the basis of her gender she was a relative outsider to this deeply patriarchal institution Accordingly academic women and in particular this first generation of women professors were officially invisible both to their male colleagues and to the institution This is not to suggest that the presence of a woman professor was unproblematic or that she sat easily on the margins of men s scholarly worlds This book traces the personal and professional histories of each woman professor and examines their contribution to the expansion of higher education for women On the basis of extensive archival research in New Zealand England and the United States the author uses Bourdieu s notions of habitus field and capital to analyse this intellectual community of women and the professionalisation of academic work The book rehabilitates the woman professor from the margins of historical scholarship and offers an insight into a forgotten aspect of the history of women s higher education the history of women and the professoriate

Science, Technologies and Material Culture in the History of Education Heather Ellis, 2020-05-18 Developed out of a 2015 conference of the History of Education Society UK this book explores the interconnections between the histories of science technologies and material culture and the history of education The contributions express a shared concern over the extent to which the history of science and technology and the history of education are too frequently written about separately from each other despite being intimately connected This state of affairs they suggest is linked to broader divisions in the history of knowledge which has for many years been carved up into sections reflective of the academic subject divisions that structure modern universities and higher education in the West Most noticeably this has occurred with the history of science but more recently the history of humanities has been divided as well The contributions to this volume demonstrate the diversity and originality of research currently being conducted into the connections between the history of science and the history of education The importance of objects in teaching and their value as pedagogical tools emerges as a particularly significant area of research located at the intersection between the two fields of enquiry Indeed it is the materiality of education a focus on the use of objects pedagogical practices and particular spaces which seems to offer some of the most promising avenues for exploring further the relationship between the histories of science and education This book was originally published as a special issue of the History of Education
