Gade,Maureen Kawaoka,1994-01-01 Our taste for blood sport stops short at the bruising clash of football players or the gloved blows of boxers and the suicide of a politician is no more than a personal tragedy What then are we to make of the ancient Romans for whom the meaning of sport and politics often depended on death In this provocative thoughtful book Paul Plass shows how the deadly violence of arena sport and political suicide served a social purpose in ancient Rome His work offers a reminder of the complex uses to which institutionalized violence can be put Violence Plass observes is a universal part of human life and so must be integrated into social order Grounding his study in evidence from Roman history and drawing on ideas from contemporary sociology and anthropology he first discusses gladiatorial combat in ancient Rome Massive bloodshed in the arena Plass argues embodied the element of danger for a society frequently engaged in war with outsiders whether slaves criminals or prisoners of war sacrificed for a sense of public security      Critical Issues for Student Affairs Arthur Sandeen,Margaret J.

and graduate levels of education The individually authored chapters also describe actions taken by employers of scientists and engineers to retain their technical work force     Marginal Worth Lionel S. Lewis,2019-01-25 In the American university system for most of this century the academic reward system has been blamed for both the neglect of teaching and a glut of uninspiring research The salaries for faculty at institutions that place special emphasis on teaching are lower than those for faculty at institutions where both teaching and research are expected In Marginal Worth Lionel S Lewis examines the contemporary academic labor market to explain why teaching which is almost universally acknowledged both off and on campus to be at the center of the American educational experience is not at the center of the academic labor market and why it is only modestly rewarded The evidence collected and analyzed by Lewis suggests that this is the case because teaching is not a particularly productive activity and its quality is hard to measure Teaching does not generate automatic prestige most students do not learn a great deal and in many instances other matters absorb the attention of faculty Fifteen anonymous academic administrators and faculty members from around the country provided Lewis with the many letters reports and other documents he used in his analysis By examining the material justifying merit salary awards he reveals how merit is defined in academia The focus of the letters is on teaching research administration and service teaching is not always seen as central to the academic role For several years and from all sides American institutions of higher learning have been called to account for a variety of failures Significantly the one indictment most often heard is that classrooms have been abandoned for laboratories and libraries where faculty pursue interests to further their careers Lewis argues that restoring the balance between teaching and research is too simple a solution to the problem We need to better understand how disciplinary and institutional reward structures affect teaching how and why faculty allocate their time and why teaching appears to be neglected and underappreciated Lewis applies tenets of the neoclassical labor market model to the academy and considers what might be done to strike a better balance between expectations and circumstances in the academic marketplace This candid look into the political economy of higher education will be enlightening reading for all concerned with the future of American higher education professors administrators students and parents     Good Business Mihaly

The University and its Disciplines Carolin Kreber,2010-07-15 University teaching and learning take place within ever more specialized disciplinary settings each characterized by its unique traditions concepts practices and procedures

It is now widely recognized that support for teaching and learning needs to take this discipline specificity into account However in a world characterized by rapid change complexity and uncertainty problems do not present themselves as distinct subjects but increasingly within trans disciplinary contexts calling for graduate outcomes that go beyond specialized knowledge and skills This ground breaking book highlights the important interplay between context specific and context transcendent aspects of teaching learning and assessment It explores critical questions such as What are the ways of thinking and practicing characteristic of particular disciplines How can students be supported in becoming participants of particular disciplinary discourse communities Can the diversity in teaching learning and assessment practices that we observe across departments be attributed exclusively to disciplinary structure To what extent do the disciplines prepare students for the complexities and uncertainties that characterize their later professional civic and personal lives Written for university teachers educational developers as well as new and experienced researchers of Higher Education this highly anticipated first edition offers innovative perspectives from leading Canadian US and UK scholars on how academic learning within particular disciplines can help students acquire the skills abilities and dispositions they need to succeed academically and also post graduation Carolin Kreber is Professor of Teaching and Learning in Higher Education and the Director of the Centre for Teaching Learning and Assessment at the University of Edinburgh
