H. Tawney, 2017-09-12 Excerpt from The Acquisitive Society But if the medicine of the constitution ought not to be made its daily food neither can its daily food be made medicine There are times which are not ordinary and in such times it is not enough to follow the road It is necessary to know where it leads and if it leads nowhere to follow another The search for another involves reflection which is uncongenial to the bustling people who describe themselves as practical because they take things as they are and leave them as they are But the practical thing for a traveller who is uncertain of his path is not to proceed with the utmost rapidity in the wrong direction it is to consider how to find the right one And the practical thing for a nation which has stumbled upon one of the turning points of history is not to behave as though nothing very important were involved as if it did not matter whether it turned to the right or to the left went up hill or down dale provided that it continued doing with a little more energy what it has done hitherto but to consider whether what it has done hitherto is wise and if it is not wise to alter it About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses
