

1867 Alaska Treaty of Cession

Alaska, with its wealth of resources, strategic location, and diverse people, was the last major territory to be acquired by the United States. The Alaska Treaty of Cession, signed in 1867, transferred the territory from Russian to American control, marking a significant moment in the nation's history.

Background

The United States had long been interested in Alaska, which was then known as Russian America. The territory was rich in fur, fish, and other natural resources, and its strategic location made it a valuable asset for the United States.

Treaty Negotiations

The negotiations for the Alaska Treaty of Cession began in 1859, when the United States and Russia agreed to open negotiations. The treaty was signed on March 30, 1867, and was ratified by the United States Senate on April 9, 1867.

Key Provisions

The treaty transferred all Russian claims to the United States, including the territory of Alaska. The United States agreed to pay Russia $7.2 million for the territory. The treaty also provided for the protection of the rights of the Russian population in Alaska.
