Housing tensions through the roof

EXCLUSIVE
Michael McGowan
Max Maddison

Labor-controlled councils have accused the state government of floating planning rules to meet national housing targets, with one local authority threatening legal action.

Two councils, Parramatta and Inner West, said the government was undermining the power of local decision-makers by seeking to overturn their rejection of proposed housing developments.

In the case of Parramatta, the council threatened legal action after the NSW government intervened to overturn a local planning panel's rejection of a proposed 1000-home development at North Rocks.

The panel had also knocked back a proposal for 220 new apartments in Leichhardt, which is covered by Inner West Council.

In the case of the North Rocks development, which would see 2000 new homes and a "garden village" built on a 12.5-hectare site, the planning panel reported the proposal because Parramatta Council argued that the plan for a series of four- to six-storey apart-

However, Planning Minister Paul Scully has instructed the department to review some local planning decisions in a bid to fast-track approvals.

The Planning Department wrote to Parramatta Council in September to inform it that it had rejected the panel "reconsider" its rejection of the development in light of "changed circumstances" of the National Housing Accord's 2029 accord targets.

The decision angered the council, with its chief executive Gail Connolly writing to Scully expressing her "surprise and disappointment" at the decision, which she said "adversely impacts the integrity of the reconsider review process".

AFP targets 'free' radicals amid rising risk of violence

EXCLUSIVE
Clare Satchorpe

The AFP has revealed it is targeting sovereign citizen groups who pose a risk of violence, amid fears some have become increasingly radicalised due to spending more time online post-pandemic.

Acting Assistant Commissioner of the AFP's Counter Terrorism and Special Investigations Command, Stephen Nutt, said the movement has been seen to "co-opt or overlap with patriot movements, conspiracy theories, anti-authoritarian and ethno-nationalist perspectives and the far-right".

Sovereign citizens generally believe every human is born "free", the government is illegitimate or corrupt, and they do not have to follow laws unless they sign a contract. NEWS PAGE 6
