Psychological and Behavioral Assessment Phyllis R. Magrab, 2012-12-06 Over the last several decades the remarkable success of science and medical technology has allowed many children with chronic illness and handicapping conditions to live longer and healthier lives But this success is not without toll The human cost of chronic illness or a handicapping condition can be enormous for the child and the family For the family there is often the stressful daily burden of care fatigue marital stress low family morale financial burdens and reduced career mobility For the child there are often arduous and painful treatment regimes frequent school absences low energy periods and uncertainties with respect to future education and vocation The course of many diseases is unpredictable and the very fact of chronicity implies ongoing coping problems for the family and the child The impact of a chronic illness or handicapping condition on a family system is usually more disintegrative than integrative disrupting the lives of all family members and exacerbating the developmental risks to the child It is not surprising that a recent comprehensive study for establishing public policies for children with chronic illness at Vanderbilt University has called attention to these factors and produced as a primary recommendation increased attention to the psychological impact of disease on the family and the child In this context there is an important need for adequate assessment of psychological and behavioral problems in these children to plan for appropriate services

Surveys In Social Research David De Vaus, David de Vaus, 2013-12-17 David de Vaus classic text Surveys in Social Research provides clear advice on how to plan conduct and analyse social surveys It emphasises the links between theory and research the logic and interpretation of statistics and the practices of social research This sixth edition has been completely revised and updated and contains new examples data and extensive lists of web resources As well as explaining how to conduct good surveys de Vaus shows how to become a critical consumer of research He argues that the logic of surveys and statistics is simply an extension of the logic we use in everyday life analysis however requires creativity and imagination rather than the application of sterile mechanical procedures The prime goal of research should be to gain accurate understanding and as a researcher use methods and techniques which enhance understanding De Vaus advocates researchers use the method rather than letting the method use you Surveys in Social Research is essential reading for students and researchers working with surveys It assumes no background in statistical analysis and gives you the tools you need to come to grips with this often challenging field of work
