Social Change and the Life Course Matilda White Riley, 1988 Social Dynamics of the Life Course Walter R. Heinz, Victor W. Marshall, In the last two decades research on the life course has successfully combined and integrated different and rather isolated fields of social concerns such as the labor market family solidarity education employment retirement and social policy It has also developed a special focus on crucial problems of sociological research which includes the understanding of micromacro phenomena the dynamics of social change and international comparisons Contributors to this volume take an international comparative approach in applying the life course theoretical framework to issues of work and career Life course research focuses on the relationship between institutions and individuals across the life span and illuminates the impact of modernization on the shaping of biographies Industrial service societies are characterized by historically new contingencies of living arrangements and biographies These contingencies differ according to the extent to which life course patterns are regulated by social institutions In the continental European context institutional frameworks continue to define the timing and sequencing of transitions across the life course In less regulated market societies like the United States and Great Britain biographies and living arrangements are shaped more by the interaction of markets social networks and individual decisions In active welfare states institutional resources and rules continue to mediate the effects of social change on the life course What the editors and contributors to this fine compendium anticipate is a change on the cultural level toward more equality This trend supports young people and women in particular in their expectations concerning an egalitarian relationship This expectation is not taken for granted from the point of view of the male partner but has to be negotiated in decisionmaking processes as an issue that concerns the couple as a unit Thus the way in which people interact is profoundly impacted by the values and goals of equity demands Walter R Heinz is professor of sociology and social psychology and director Graduate School of Social Sciences University of Bremen Victor W Marshall is professor of sociology and director of the Institute on Aging University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Carolina Social Change and the Life Course: Sociological lives American Sociological Association. fertility transition while the Netherlands has already achieved fertility transition. The two cultural contexts are both diverse and unique in character. The author explores both the uniqueness as well as the similarities hence studying the impact of higher education on the changing lives of women as a continuum across cultures and societies. Changes at the individual level are captured by distinguishing women into older and younger generations while changes at the societal level are captured through social change. At the individual level we distinguish between the lived life course and the perceived life course. At the societal level we focus on how higher educational attainment has enhanced women's position in the society. The study uses secondary data from the National Family Health Survey 1998-1999 for the state of Karnataka and the Netherlands Family Fertility Survey OG 98. In addition to the secondary data, in-depth interviews were also conducted amongst women in Bangalore and Groningen.
