Beres, 2021-06-02 The enormous potential for destruction that lies latent in nuclear technology inevitably gives rise to the possibility of nuclear terrorism the use of nuclear explosives or radioactivity by insurgent groups Professor Beres considers the factors that might foster such terrorism the forms it might take and the probable consequences of each form He then identifies a coherent strategy of counternuclear terrorism one that embraces both technological and behavioral measures that suggests policies for deterrence and situation management on both national and international levels and that points toward a major refashioning of world order Global Security and the War on Terror Paul Rogers, 2007-07-04 As the War on Terror evolves into the Long War against Islamo fascism it demands an enduring commitment to ensuring the security of the United States and its allies This policy is based on the requirement to maintain control in a fractured and unpredictable global environment while paying little attention to the underlying issues that lead to insecurity It is an approach that is manifestly failing as the continuing problems in Afghanistan and Iraq demonstrate Moreover control implies the maintenance of a global order that focuses on power remaining in the hands of a transnational elite community principally focused on North America and Western Europe but extending worldwide This elite largely ignores socio economic divisions and environmental constraints and sees continuing stability as being best achieved by the maintenance of the status quo using force when necessary This collection of essays by Professor Paul Rogers argues that this post Cold War security paradigm is fundamentally misguided and unsustainable It concludes with two new essays on the need for a new conception of global security rooted in justice and emancipation Global Security and the War on Terror will be essential reading for students and scholars of security studies the Cold War international relations and development studies Terrorism Susheela
