Terrorism and the News Media A. Odasuo Alali, Gary W. Roberts, 2013-10-28 Politicians and bureaucrats claim credit for the federal government s successes in preparing for and responding to disaster and they are also blamed for failures outside of government s control New interventions have created precedents and established organizations and administrative cultures that accumulated over time and produced a trend in which citizens politicians and bureaucrats expect the government to provide more security from more kinds of disasters Despite the rhetoric however the federal government s increasingly bold claims and heightened public expectations are disproportionate to the ability of the federal government to prevent or reduce the damage caused by disaster Resources in Education , 1997
