

THE ETHICAL OPHTHALMOLOGIST

Research • New Technology • Collegiality

Author: The Ethics Committee of the American Academy of Ophthalmology

(Material adapted from the The Ethical Ophthalmologist: A Primer, a text by the Ethics Committee of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.)

Summary: This course covers ethical issues and concerns and their impact on every day decision-making in ophthalmology. The case study approach, with questions and discussion, provides an opportunity to recognize and analyze ethical dilemmas. These learning activities will also heighten awareness of ethical and moral principles in certain aspects of contemporary medical practice such as research and new technology, delegated services, commercial relationships, compensation, and advertising.

Audience: Ophthalmologists, eye care professionals, and ethicists.

Objectives: After completing The Ethical Ophthalmologist: Course III, you should be able to explain the ethical approach you would take in handling the delegation of non-physician services, the dilemmas posed by research and new technology, and issues of collegiality.

Accreditation: The American Academy of Ophthalmology is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCM) to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

Designation Statement: The American Academy of Ophthalmology designates this educational activity for a maximum of one AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

CME: CME credit is available to all users of this educational activity.

Financial Disclosure: The authors acknowledge no financial interest in the subject matter of this course.

Editor's Note: This text is for educational purposes. It is intended to promote discussion and understanding of the ethical issues facing ophthalmologists. This text does not interpret, modify, amend, or supplement the Code of Ethics of the American Academy of Ophthalmology or any of the Advisory Opinions. All names used in the case studies in this text are fictitious, and have no intended relationship to any persons involved in any past or present ethics matter considered by the Academy's Ethics Committee. Any similarities in the names chosen in the case studies to those of actual ophthalmologists or other persons are entirely coincidental.

Finally, although this project was undertaken with the full support and encouragement of the Academy's Board of Trustees, and was completed with the invaluable assistance of the Academy staff and resources, the text itself is the sole product of, and responsibility of, the individual authors and editors.

INTRODUCTION

Ethics in Ophthalmology? "Of course," you might respond. "Ethical crises can arise in any medical specialty. When they do, we make a conscientious effort to address and resolve them, and then return to our primary responsibility, managing the medical problems at hand." The fact is, ethical concerns are not limited to occasional events we might describe as crises. Rather, they permeate even the simplest decisions we make in relation to our patients. Ethical principles and behavior are an integral part of the practice of medicine. For this reason, the ability to recognize and act on ethical issues is an essential qualification of the competent physician, the competent ophthalmologist, and the whole person.
