Environmental Justice and the Rights of Indigenous Peoples Laura Westra, 2012-05-16 More than 300 million people in over 70 countries make up the world's indigenous populations. Yet despite ever growing pressures on their lands, environment and way of life through outside factors such as climate change and globalization their rights in these and other respects are still not fully recognized in international law. In this incisive book Laura Westra deftly reveals the lethal effects that damage to ecological integrity can have on communities. Using examples in national and international case law she demonstrates how their lack of sufficient legal rights leaves indigenous peoples defenceless time and again in the face of governments and businesses who have little effective incentive to consult with them let alone gain their consent in going ahead with relocations, mining plans and more. The historical background and current legal instruments are discussed and through examples from the Americas, Africa, Oceania and the special case of the Arctic a picture emerges of how things must change if indigenous communities are to survive. It is a warning to us all from the example of those who live most closely in tune with nature and are the first to feel the impact when environmental damage goes unchecked

Invasive species in the New Caledonian archipelago : a major economic and environmental hazard Marie-Laure Beauvais, Alain Coléno, Hervé Jourdan, 2006 La biodiversité calédonienne reconnue comme l'une des plus exceptionnelles avec son fort taux d'endémisme est largement menacée par l'introduction de nouvelles espèces. Il est donc important de protéger l'écosystème calédonien, la fois riche et vulnérable des espèces envahissantes. L'une des principales causes de perte de la biodiversité mondiale. Face à cette menace le Gouvernement et les trois provinces de Nouvelle Calédonie souhaitent mettre en place une structure collective afin de définir les orientations stratégiques nécessaires pour préserver et conserver leur biodiversité. Elles ont ainsi voulu qu'un état des connaissances soit dressé et qu'une réflexion soit menée sur la prévention, la détection précoce, l'intervention rapide, l'éradication, le confinement et le contrôle des espèces envahissantes. Cette expertise collective apporte les éléments nécessaires à la construction d'un système de biosécurité pertinent et efficace pour l'archipel néo-calédonien
