The Peruvian Industrial Labor Force

David Chaplin

The Peruvian Industrial Labor Force:

The Peruvian Industrial Labor Force David Chaplin, 2015-12-08 This is a sociological analysis of change and mobility in the labor force of thirteen of the largest textile factories in Peru. The book explores demographic and social variables such as age, sex, birthplace, migration, seniority, current and former occupations, and employment status as possible indices of rationality in the Peruvian labor market. There are two especially striking empirical findings: the Peruvian textile industry has not been plagued by the high levels of labor turnover generally assumed to be inevitable in underdeveloped countries since 1955; women are being shut out of better paying manufacturing jobs because of welfare laws that make them more expensive to employ than men. Originally published in 1967, The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print-on-demand technology to again make available previously out-of-print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press. These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions. The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905.

The Peruvian Industrial Labor Force David Chaplin, 1967

The Recruitment of the Peruvian Industrial Labor Force David Chaplin, 1963

The Origins of the Peruvian Labor Movement, 1883-1919 Peter Blanchard, 2010-11-23 In January 1919 the Peruvian government issued a decree establishing the eight-hour work day, the culmination of thirty years of struggle by Peru's workers and evidence of the increasing influence of the labor movement in Peruvian politics and society. Beginning in October 1883, at the time of the Treaty of Ancón terminating four years of warfare with Chile, Peru's workers started a thirty-year effort to become an active and influential sector of society. They formed organizations, actively participated in the nation's political life, engaged in industrial agitation, all revealing a growing class consciousness and an ability to compel both employers and governments to respond to their demands. Blanchard's analysis and insights into the economic factors underlying Peru's labor unrest also extends to labor developments and the modernization process throughout Latin America.

Peruvian Nationalism David Chaplin, 1976-01-01 Peru is the most interesting model of justice and development in Latin America today. To analyze the sociopolitical progress of this nation, David Chaplin has gathered together and edited this interdisciplinary collection of essays. Peru's development is unique for several reasons. First, it has shown that a military force that was trained largely by the United States can employ its professional expertise not to remain a well-behaved ally but to pull off a genuinely radical nationalist revolution even at the expense of various interests of its benefactor. Second, Peru has proven that successful economic development need be neither capitalist nor socialist. Peruvian Nationalism contains major papers by leading Peruvianists on the 1960s and on the current revolutionary military regime. The temporal focus is on the current post-1968 revolutionary military government, with background material covering the early 1960s. Contributors are all social scientists, including American, Italian, and Peruvian writers who have carried out field research in Peru. The primary focus of this volume is the radical change being carried out by the current military structure Relevant background topics include Peru's sociopolitical structure during the 1960s especially under the Belaunde regime with particular attention to peasant movements and agrarian reform a reassessment of the pre 1968 golpe coup de etat behavior of former military governments an analysis of the uniquely radical ideology and concrete reforms of the current military government This social science reader on Peru is a scholarly as well as sympathetic treatment of Peru's national and local politics social structure agrarian and tax reform and peasant movements The editor has provided an extensive introduction and index and has also included a thorough bibliography of publications on Peru since 1960 The Cambridge History of Latin America Leslie Bethell, 1984

This is an authoritative large scale history of the whole of Latin America from the first contacts between native American peoples and Europeans in the late fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries to the present day Peasant Cooperation and

Capitalist Expansion in Central Peru Norman Long, Bryan R. Roberts, 2014-11-06 This book brings together the research into regional development and social change carried out in highland Peru by a team of British and Latin American social anthropologists and sociologists The area studied the Mantaro Valley of central Peru is one of the most densely populated and economically differentiated of highland zones it is also notable for its community based forms of cooperation and its high level of peasant political activity The book presents a series of case studies that examine cooperative forms of organization in relation to developments in the regional economy and to changes in national policy The analysis attempts to avoid interpreting local processes merely as responses to externally initiated change It stresses instead the need to consider the interplay of local and national forces because local groups and processes themselves affect the pattern of regional and national development The case studies cover a range of political and economic topics from peasant movements to the achievements and shortcomings of government sponsored agricultural and manufacturing cooperatives The concluding chapter by the editors explores the theoretical implications of these studies Men in a Developing Society Jorge

Balán, Harley Linwood Browning, Elizabeth Jelin, 2014-05-23 The central objective of Men in a Developing Society is to show as concretely as possible how men experience a period of rapid economic development particularly in the areas of migration occupational mobility and status attainment It is based mainly on a sample of 1 640 men in Monterrey Mexico a large and rapidly growing manufacturing metropolis in northern Mexico with much in migration and a sample of 380 men in Cedral San Luis Potos a small economically depressed community with high rates of out migration much of it to Monterrey The study of men in Monterrey is perhaps the most thorough one yet conducted of geographic and social mobility in a Latin American city In part this was possible because of the innovation of collecting complete life histories that record what each man was doing for any given year in the lay areas of residence education family formation and work These data permit the effective use of the concepts of life cycle and cohort analysis in the interpretation of the men's geographic and occupational mobility The experience of the Monterrey men in adapting to the varied changes required by their mobility was not found to be as difficult as is often indicated in the social science literature on the consequences of economic development In part this may be because Monterrey in comparison with most other Latin American cities has been unusually successful in its economic growth The impact of migration also was lessened because most of the men had visited the city prior to moving there and many had friends or relatives in the city The age of the migrants upon arrival in Monterrey made a significant difference in subsequent occupational mobility those of nonfarm background who arrived before age 25 fared better than natives of the city Although it appears that status inheritance in Monterrey is somewhat higher than in industrialized countries a considerable proportion of men do move up the occupational ladder And perhaps as important the Monterrey men whether or not they themselves are moving up perceive the society as an open one The very success of Monterrey s development created conditions that would bring about changes in the educational economic and cultural expectations of its inhabitants Thus paradoxically the general satisfaction and the lack of group and class conflict in Monterrey over the previous decades may well have given rise to future dissatisfaction and conflict
