Reframing Peace Mediation Owen Frazer, 2024-08-02. This book explains how facilitative mediators those without material leverage contribute to progress in peace negotiations. While existing theories of mediation have offered suggestions about what a mediator should get parties to do to reach an agreement the puzzle that has remained is how does a mediator get parties to do what is prescribed. The book argues that a communication perspective is key to understanding facilitative mediation and that framing is the main mechanism by which facilitative mediation functions. Based on an empirical analysis of the United Nations mediation in El Salvador between 1990 and 1992 the work breaks new ground by uncovering three underlying mechanisms that explain how a mediator can get their framing adopted by the negotiating parties thereby advancing the negotiations. The book offers a novel theory of facilitative mediation as framing and an innovative methodological approach that focuses on negotiation impasses to study the process of how negotiations progress. Practitioners will also appreciate the framework for thinking about when and how framing and reframing can be used to increase mediation's effectiveness as a tool for ending armed conflict. This book will be of much interest to students of peace and conflict studies negotiation Latin American politics and International Relations as well as practitioners.

The Oxford Handbook of Public Policy Michael Moran, Martin Rein, Robert E. Goodin, 2008-06-13. The Oxford Handbooks of Political Science is a ten volume set of reference books offering authoritative and engaging critical overviews of the state of political science Each volume focuses on a particular part of the discipline with volumes on Public Policy Political Theory Political Economy Contextual Political Analysis Comparative Politics International Relations Law and Politics Political Behavior Political Institutions and Political Methodology The project as a whole is under the General Editorship of Robert E Goodin with each volume being edited by a distinguished international group of specialists in their respective fields The books set out not just to report on the discipline but to shape it The series will be an indispensable point of reference for anyone working in political science and adjacent disciplines Public policy is the business end of political science It is where theory meets practice in the pursuit of the public good Political scientists approach public policy in myriad ways Some approach the policy process descriptively asking how the need for public intervention comes to be perceived a policy response formulated enacted implemented and all too often subverted perverted altered or abandoned Others approach public policy more prescriptively offering politically informed suggestions for how normatively valued goals can and should be pursued either through particular policies or through alternative processes for making policy Some offer their advice from the Olympian heights of detached academic observers others as engaged scholars cum advocates while still others seek to instil more reflective attitudes among policy practitioners themselves toward their own practices The Oxford Handbook of Public Policy mines all these traditions using an innovative structure that responds to the very latest scholarship Its chapters touch upon institutional and historical sources and analytical methods how policy is made how it is evaluated and how it is constrained In these ways the Handbook shows how the combined wisdom of political science as a whole can be brought to bear on political attempts to improve the human condition Negotiation Theory and Research Leigh L. Thompson, 2006-01-13 Negotiation is the most important skill anyone in the business world can have today because people must continually negotiate their jobs responsibilities and opportunities Yet very few people know strategies for maximizing their outcomes in everyday and in more formal business situations This volume provides a comprehensive overview of this emerging topic through original contributions from leaders in social psychology and negotiation research All topics covered are core to the understanding of the negotiation process and include decision making and judgment emotion and negotiation motivation and game theory The Expert Negotiator Raymond Saner, 2021-11-01 Success in negotiation is not a matter of chance but the result of careful planning and specialized skills Some of these skills are inborn others need to be learnt In this book the psychologist and economist Dr Raymond Saner draws on his long years of experience as a negotiation trainer and university lecturer to show that two thirds of negotiation practice is learnable Yet very few people are specifically trained in this everyday task Without sacrificing scientific accuracy Dr Saner offers a highly readable and fascinating guide to the subject In so doing he does not limit himself to the over simplified tips generally put out on successful bargaining in every imaginable situation Rather he treats the different aspects of negotiation practice in a way that is useful to the both academics and practitioners such that the general laws and principles gradually become evident as and of themselves The aim of this approach is to reveal the essence of negotiation through the experience of both the author and the reader Such an understanding of the processes involved in negotiation is of far greater practical value than a mere collection of recipes with no discussion of the underlying theory while the most comprehensive treatment of the theory without reference to its application in practice would be only half the story Thus the text is supplemented by a series of illustrative examples and case studies from the business and political arenas plus some seventy figures and tables With all this the author has paid considerable attention to writing a text that is both entertaining to read and rigorous in content This work was originally published in German Strategic Interpersonal Communication John A. Daly, John M.

Wiemann, 2013-01-11 This book discusses how people go about achieving their social goals through human symbolic interaction The editors collective presumption is that there are more or less typical ways that people attempt to obtain desired outcomes be they persuasive informative conflictive or the like through communication Representing a first summary of research done by scholars primarily in the communication discipline this volume seeks to identify and understand how it is that people achieve what they want through social interaction Under the very broad label of strategies this research has sought to identify critical social goals such as gaining compliance generating affinity resolving social conflict and offering information specify for each goal the ways or strategies by which people can go about achieving these goals determine predictors of strategy selection that is why does a person opt for one strategy over others to obtain the desired end The research also reflects the attention the field of communication has given to strategy issues in the past 15 years The chapters describe research on the ways in which people achieve different goals and summarize existing research and theory on the attainment of social goals Readers will gain insight into many of the issues that exist regardless of the strategy being discussed Thus this volume may not include chapters on topics such as ways people elicit or offer disclosure ways people demonstrate anger or ways people create guilt but the issues that appear consistently throughout the various chapters should apply equally to these Finally the essays in this volume provide not only a summary of what has been accomplished to date but also an initial theoretic map for future research concerning strategic interpersonal communication Handbook of Joint Fact-Finding in Urban Planning and Environmental Disputes Masahiro Matsuura, Todd Schenk, 2016-10-04 The days of rationalist scientific management and deference to official data are behind us The credibility of experts and the information they provide are regularly challenged officials are routinely provided with conflicting sets of facts as they plan and make decisions and decision makers and stakeholders alike are largely skeptical that technical information will adequately account for the various interests and concerns and lead to the right outcomes They struggle to reconcile technical information with other forms of knowledge and differing interests priorities and perspectives Issues like climate change are complicating matters even further as scientists and technicians must increasingly acknowledge the uncertainty and potential fallibility of their findings and highlight the dynamic nature of the systems they are explaining This book examines how groups looking to plan and make decisions in any number of areas can wade through the imperfect and often contradictory information they have to make fair efficient wise and well informed choices It introduces an emerging and very promising approach called joint fact finding JFF Rather than each stakeholder group marshaling the set of facts that best advance their respective interests and perspectives while discrediting the contradictory facts others provide groups are challenged to collaboratively generate shared sets of facts that all parties accept This book introduces readers to the theory of JFF the value it can provide and how they can adopt this approach in practice It brings together writings from leading practitioners and scholars from around the world that are at the forefront of the JFF approach to science intensive policymaking urban planning and environmental dispute resolution The first set of chapters outlines the concept of JFF and situates it within other bodies of theory and practice The second set of case based chapters elucidates how JFF is being applied in practice This book delivers a new perspective to scholars in the field of public policy urban planning environmental studies and science and technology studies as well as public officials technical experts policy consultants and professional facilitators
