

In Dialogue with the More-than-Human: Affective Prefiguration in Encounters with Others

Ann Light, University of Sussex and Malmö University

Insights

- To effect urgent change, we require different capacities for feeling as well as different feelings.
- Affective prefiguration means giving experience in the present of what else might be emotionally and relationally possible.
- Dialoguing with the more-than-human broadens our repertoire of feeling and supports transformations toward more just and sustainable futures.

I have been talking about practices that give people the chance to feel differently. Not only to feel different, but to feel relationships that are not ubiquitously available at present. I call this affective prefiguration.

We have seen the idea of prefiguration enter design in relation to prefigurative politics. Carl DiSalvo championed it [1] and there is inspiring work from, for instance, Mariam Assad and Alix Gerber. In its political form, prefiguration is commonly understood as enacting the change one wants to see. Much of this thinking has concerned itself with alternative and progressive organizational structures—new economics, different legal systems, regenerative care facilities—emerging in niches and created as part of social movements determined to do better. Sometimes the new structures become absorbed; others persist as alternatives; some exist only as long as needed to make a point. These structures and the imaginaries that accompany them are what Davina Cooper has called everyday utopias [2]. They leave a legacy, giving us something to aspire to; a direction of travel. In ways akin to utopian science fiction, they present us with a hopeful but practical vision. Even those that fail to take hold signal how difference could arise. David Graeber and David Wengrow's colossal book The Dawn of Everything [3] presents, in this spirit, the diverse ways the anthropologist/archaeologist authors

The Rhetoric of Cultural Dialogue Jeffrey S. Librett, 2000 In this groundbreaking work the author effects the first extended rhetorical philosophical reading of the historically problematic relationship between Jews and Germans based on an analysis of texts from the Enlightenment through Modernism by Moses Mendelssohn Friedrich and Dorothea Schlegel Karl Marx Richard Wagner Friedrich Nietzsche and Sigmund Freud The theoretical underpinning of the work lies in the author's rereading in terms of contemporary rhetorical theory of the medieval tradition known as figural representation which defines the Jewish Christian relation as that between the dead prefigural letter and the living fulfilled spirit After arguing that the German Enlightenment ultimately plays out the historical phantasm of a necessary Judaization of Protestant rationality the author shows that German Early Romanticism consists fundamentally in the attempt to solve the aporias raised by this impossible confrontation between Protestant spirit and Jewish letter In readings of Dorothea Schlegel Mendelssohn's daughter and her husband Friedrich Schlegel the author provides a new interpretation of the Neo Catholic turn of later German Romanticism Further he situates the proleptic end and reversal of the project of Jewish emancipation in the two extreme versions of late nineteenth century anti Judaism those of Marx and Wagner here viewed as binary concretizations of a specifically post Romantic paganized Protestantism Finally the author argues that twentieth century Modernism as represented by Nietzsche and Freud renews if in a multiply ironic displacement the secret Judaizing tendencies of the Enlightenment Fascism and Communism both denigrate this Modernism which affirms the letter of language as quasi synonymous with the force of temporality or anticipatory repetition that disrupts all claims to the full presence of spirit The book ends with a note on recent debates about Holocaust memory

Ginev, 2019-07-22 Ginev works out a conception of the constitution of scientific objects in terms of hermeneutic phenomenology Recently there has been a revival of interest in hermeneutic theories of scientific inquiry The present study is furthering this interest by shifting the focus from interpretive methods and procedures to the kinds of reflexivity operating in scientific conceptualization According to the book s central thesis a reflexive conceptualization enables one to take into consideration the role which the ontic ontological difference plays in the constitution of scientific objects The book argues for this thesis by analyzing the formation of objects of inquiry in a range of scientific domains stretching from highly formalized domains where the quest for objects identities is carried out in terms of objects emancipation from structures to linguistic and historiographic programs that avoid procedural objectification in their modes of conceptualization The book sets up a new strategy for the dialogue between the theories of scientific inquiry and hermeneutic phenomenology Hermeneutical Approaches in Psychology of Religion, 2025-02-10 Contemporary psychology is reviving with new vigor an interest in hermeneutics or the human science of interpretation After a period in which positivistic and statistical approaches have been dominant new methods are being explored Most of these focus on narrative cultural analysis embodiment and interdisciplinarity Because of its specific object of study psychology of religion has never been without an hermeneutical emphasis In this field of psychology scholarship these new directions are especially welcomed as they offer perspectives for research which attempts to interpret religion as a human phenomenon This volume presents hermeneutical psychological studies on religion which rely on both classical and contemporary approaches Dealing with topics like mysticism religious symbols life stories and mental health contributions to the volume draw on a variety of perspectives These range from psychoanalysis narrative psychology and feminism to perspectives drawn deep from the wellspring of interdisciplinary collaboration with anthropology and history
