

author moves out (with great interest to the reader) to this branch of law in "socialist" countries and to others less well known in this field, Switzerland and Spain. Fortunately within this part each system is not separated and treated in isolation, so that one part on the United Kingdom is called "Timide application de la théorie de l'imprévision"—a heading which, however, does too much credit to the theories of those engaged in the cases. Thereafter the book settles to a solid discussion of its subject-matter under Belgian law, with some diversions. The diversions are important; there is quick discussion of public contracts under NATO, BENELUX and EEC. These new dimensions, especially the last one, are important and it is good to find them in this setting.

Belgian law is very thoroughly analysed, type of contract, modes of formation and questions of competence, error, fraud and the like are dealt with. The weight is on the first two groups of problems, but the passages on the competence of the administration are particularly welcome. In these parts of the book comparative law (especially comparison with French law) is not neglected, and they are all enlivened by constant reference to the facts and economics of the problem. The range of periodicals cited is an indication of that. Moreover, the author, happily for those with limited access to Belgian law reports, cites extensively from judgments so that the whole story is clear.

Of course there are details one can criticise. The evolution from Wunderlich in the U.S. might be fuller; the question of the execution of some contracts, e.g., for printing forms en régie in France likewise, and, in the context of the Treaty of Rome, a reference to SOPECO would have helped. To pursue these matters would merely be to flash one's union card as one who had served an apprenticeship in this field. On such general matters, of course, there is room for debate but the virtue of the book is its breadth. It should be read at a time when here we are again regulating direct labour operations (en régie is not an unreasonable comparison), and slowly, arduously and inadequately, review board procedures are being worked out as a consequence of the Ferranti affairs. What is more, properly treated, as here, public contracts lead to many reflections. The role of the Belgian Conseil d'Etat herein is of great interest, as are the remarks of the author on the need to tie things together in an administrative jurisdiction. His constant insistence on Motifs (e.g., p. 558), references to moralité administrative; the insistence (p. 510) on the lessons of economic reality in this field, and (p. 343) on the facts of administrative life constantly lead the reader into wider speculation. The book is not, then, only full of substance; it is, read with any care, a stimulating one. The author must be congratulated on Volume I and one waits with impatience for Volume II.

Soviet Citizenship Law. By G. GINSBURGS. [Leyden: A. W. Sijthoff. 1968. 260 pp. Being Vol. 15 of Law in Eastern Europe.]

DR. GINSBURGS' erudite work is far more than a description of the general norms of Soviet law on the subject of citizenship, a topic on which sources are sparse; it is a detailed account and critique of Soviet treaty-practice on the subject of citizenship, expatriation and repatriation, during the post-Revolutionary period, the period of the rapprochement with Germany in 1939 and the aftermath of the Second World War. It is largely concerned with international law and the movement of populations. Yet since many countries test the rules of family law and succession by the lex patriae the work will also be of great use to the private lawyer in the field of private international law. Among the large subjects covered by the book are statelessness and dual nationality. The learned author abundantly proves his main thesis, that Soviet citizenship is often acquired involuntarily and is difficult to lose

Soviet Citizenship Law:

The Citizenship Law of the USSR George Ginsburgs, 1983-01-01 Commentary on the nationality legislation of the USSR covers historical background federal and republican citizenship marriage children dual nationality emigration immigration extradition statelessness naturalization loss and restoration of citizenship administrative aspects and civil rights Bibliography

The Citizenship Law of the USSR George Ginsburgs, 2024-12-02 In 1968 the predecessor of this volume was published as Number 15 of the Law in Eastern Europe series under the title Soviet Citizenship Law The decision to put out a new version of that study was prompted by the enactment in 1978 of the CUTTent Law on the Citizenship of the USSR and the various changes in Soviet practice in this domain which occurred in the intervening decade I have drawn on the earlier work for background material and in order to make comparisons between the previous record here and the substance of the latest statute However the present monograph is not a second edition in the sense of being an expanded and updated revision of the original but stands as an independent piece of research and analysis Thus three of the chapters out of a total of six featured in the 1968 volume citizenship and state succession state succession and option of nationality and refugees and displaced persons have now been omitted for the simple reason that the situation in these areas has remained virtually static during the past ten years so that the initial treatment requires no significant alteration On the other hand fresh problems have meantime arisen such as for instance the connection between citizenship and emigration and the relationship between citizenship status and the international protection of human rights which called for attention and are dealt with in this book

Cumulative Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1983 Migration, Refugee Policy, and State Building in Postcommunist Europe Oxana Shevel, 2011-10-24 Why do similar postcommunist states respond differently to refugees Why do some states privilege certain refugee groups while other states do not This book presents a theory to account for this puzzle and it centers on the role of the politics of nation building and of the office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees UNHCR A key finding of the book is that when the boundaries of a nation are contested and thus there is no consensus on which group should receive preferential treatment in state policies a political space for a receptive and nondiscriminatory refugee policy opens up The book speaks to the broader questions of how nationalism matters after communism and under what conditions and through what mechanisms international actors can influence domestic policies The analysis is based on extensive primary research the author conducted in four languages in the Czech Republic Poland Russia and Ukraine International and National Law in Russia and Eastern Europe Ferdinand J.M. Feldbrugge, Roger Clark, Stanislaw Pomorski, 2021-11-22 The disappearance of the USSR as a superpower to be replaced by the Russian Federation and a host of new states has had wide ranging consequences in the field of law The establishment of market economies and the need to set up institutional frameworks to foster the rule of law have precipitated comprehensive domestic law reforms in the countries concerned The major focus of the present work however is on the metamorphosis of the network of international law relations brought about by the fundamental change in the political and constitutional climate and the emergence of numerous new actors Apart from the relations between states as the classical province of international law the impact of international law on national legal orders has acquired overwhelming importance and the successor states of the Soviet Union have not escaped the effect of this development Some of the most urgent questions thrown up by these developments are analyzed by a team of leading legal specialists from the Russian Federation North America and Western Europe

Extraterritorial Citizenship in Postcommunist Europe Timofey Agarin,Ireneusz Pawel Karolewski,2015-09-29 What role does the protection of citizens abroad play in motivating states policies How does citizenship of non residents map onto domestic nation building projects And in what ways do extraterritorial citizenship issues differ from those related to diaspora and migration This volume develops a new analytical framework for emerging research on how states establish relationships with non resident citizens and resident non citizens It provides new insights on the changing relationship between states and the societies they govern particularly in light of the liberalization of the state institutions on the one hand and their approach to citizenship as a political resource on the other Examining a range of European states in the post communist region the book illustrates the complex geopolitical interests and interstate relations involved with these policy decisions whilst highlighting the relevance of similar issues around the globe
