Gerard Manley Hopkins's Poetics of Anxiety and Transience Mirko Starčević, 2023-10-25 This book analyses the themes of anxiety and transience in the poetical thought of Gerard Manley Hopkins a prominent 19th century poet The book argues that despite Hopkins's strong religious beliefs his artistic vision and quest for an original aesthetic were the foremost concerns in his poetry The author examines Hopkins's early interest in transience which he later developed through the influence of the philosopher Duns Scotus and the aesthetic critic Walter Pater In the second half of the book the author employs Martin Heidegger's philosophy to deepen our understanding of Hopkins's poetics of anxiety and transience He illuminates how these themes shaped Hopkins's poetic voice revealing his affinity with Romanticism and his belief that transience and anxiety enhance rather than hinder the creative process The book provides a fresh perspective on Hopkins's work challenging the prevailing views that downplay the importance of these themes While the book is primarily a contribution to literary scholarship it may also appeal to readers interested in the intersection of literature philosophy and art including one of his most famous works The Rime of the Ancient Mariner. A second edition was published in 1800 in which Wordsworth included additional poems and a preface detailing the pair's avowed poetical principles.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge 1772-1834 was an English poet, literary critic, and philosopher who, with his friend William Wordsworth, was a founder of the Romantic Movement in England and a member of the Lake Poets. He wrote the poems The Rime of the Ancient Mariner and Kubla Khan, as well as the major prose work Biographia Literaria.

William Wordsworth 1770-1850 was a major English Romantic poet who, with Samuel Taylor Coleridge, helped to launch the Romantic Age in English literature with their joint publication Lyrical Ballads (1798).

Halfway House Frank William Nielsen Wright, 1983

The Halfway House Guillermo Rosales, 2013-10-20

This posthumous translation of Rosales, a Cuban American writer who committed suicide in 1993, delivers a raw, powerful story set in a Miami home for the mentally ill. It's a frightening, nihilistic cousin of One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest. Publishers Weekly: "Never before available in English, The Halfway House is a trip to the darkest corners of the human condition. Humiliations, filth, stench, and physical abuse comprise the asphyxiating atmosphere of a halfway house for indigents in Miami, where, in a shaken mental state, the writer William Figueras lives after his exile from Cuba. He claims to have gone crazy after the Cuban government judged his first novel morose, pornographic, and also irreverent because it dealt harshly with the Communist Party and prohibited its publication. By the time he arrives in Miami, twenty years later, he is a toothless, skinny, frightened guy who had to be admitted to a psychiatric ward that very day instead of the ready-for-success exile his relatives expected to welcome and receive among them. Placed in a halfway house with its trapped, bestial inhabitants and abusive overseers, he enters a hell. Romance appears in the form of Frances, a mentally fragile woman and an angel with whom he tries to escape in this apocalyptic classic of Cuban literature. Behind the hardly one hundred pages, Canarias Diario stated is the work of a tireless fabulist, a writer who delights in language, extracting verbs and adjectives which are powerful enough to stop the reader in his tracks."

Collected Poems Peter Redgrove, 2012-01-31

Peter Redgrove, who died in 2003, was one of the most prolific of post-war poets, and as this Collected Poems reveals, one of the finest. A friend and contemporary of Ted Hughes and Sylvia Plath in the early 1950s, Redgrove was regarded by many as their equal, and his work has been championed by a wide variety of writers, from Margaret Drabble to Colin Wilson, Douglas Dunn to Seamus Heaney. Ted Hughes once wrote warmly to Redgrove of how important you've been to me. You've no idea how much right from the first time we met. In this first Collected Poems, Neil Roberts has gathered together the best poems from twenty-six volumes of verse, from The Collector (1959) to the three books published posthumously. The result is an unearthed treasure trove of poems that find new and thrilling ways of celebrating the natural world and the human condition; poems that dazzle with their visual imagination; poems that show the huge range and depth of the poet's art. In Redgrove's poetry, there is a
