aren't rejecting and relegating democracy because it's bad; they're challenging it because it isn't relevant to their priorities and needs. The peacebuilding moment when consent for intervention is present and the opportunity to build a sustainable social contract between peacebuilders and people is most fruitful is being squandered. This relationship between governed and governance relies on mutual needs realization but there is no formal or informal requirement and mechanism for ascertaining what the subjects of peacebuilding might prioritize. Instead, peacebuilders give the subjects of peacebuilding what they think they should have. This legitimacy gap between what peacebuilders give and what subjects want is the subject of this book. Through a range of empirical case studies conducted by country specialists, the book reveals that when asked, people often prioritize roads, electricity, jobs, housing, schooling, and pertinent justice amongst other things in the immediate aftermath of war. We find that mapping this locus of legitimacy may help develop the kind of relationship upon which the sustainability of any social contract between governed and governance rests. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Intervention and Statebuilding.

The Nonprofit Sector: Partner in Civil Society, Reaching the City Gary Fujino, Timothy R. Sisk, Tereso C. Casino, 2012-06-28. Rapid urbanization and globalization processes worldwide have changed the landscape of our times. In Asia and Africa, the number of urban dwellers increases by an average of one million per week according to the United Nations. More than half of the globe's seven billion human beings now live in cities. These realities have far-reaching implications for mission in urban contexts at the start of the third millennium. Reaching the City: Reflections on Urban Mission for the Twenty-first Century seeks to address the missiological challenges associated with this new world order. Each author in this collection respectfully builds upon the significant contributions of seminal writers such as Ray Bakke, Jacques Ellul, Basil of Caesarea, and others while making new and creative proposals for urban mission in our world today. Beginning with the bigger picture of the global challenges of urbanization and moving through theological, historical, and educational perspectives, this volume concludes with a rich bevy of case studies engaging these new realities of both North American and international cities to encourage a missional thrust to reach these communities.
