Story Of The Oregon Trail:

Westward Vision David Lavender,1985-01-01 In one very real sense David Lavender writes the story of the Oregon Trail begins with Columbus This opening suggests the panoramic sweep of his history of that famous trail In chiseled colorful prose Lavender illustrates the westward vision that impelled the early explorers of the American interior looking for a northwest passage and send fur trappers into the region charted by Lewis and Clark For the emigrants following the trappers routes that vision gradually grew into a sense of a manifest American destiny Lavender describes the efforts of emigration societies of missionaries like Marcus and Narcissa Whitman and of early pioneer settlers like Hall Jackson Kelley Jason Lee and Thomas Jefferson Farnham as well as the routes they took to the Promised Land He concludes by recounting the first large scale emigrations of 1843 45 which steeled the U S government for war with Mexico and agreements with Britain over the Oregon boundary

Westward vision : the story of the Oregon Trail David Sievert Lavender,1971 Facing West Kathleen V. Kudlinski,1996-08-01 When his family travels west via wagon train in 1845 Ben faces many adventures and hardships Along with the dangers of rough weather and wild animals Ben also fears the possibility that he might have a devastating asthma attack As his family sets out from Missouri to Oregon young Ben wonders whether he will have more trouble with the dangers of the journey or his debilitating asthma

Surviving the Journey Danny Kravitz,2014-07-01 Examines the Oregon Trail by discussing how and why it came to be and the immediate and lasting effects it had on the nation and the people who traveled it

Facing West: A Story of the Oregon Trail Kathleen V. Kudlinski,1994 As his family sets out from Missouri to Oregon young Ben wonders whether he will have more trouble with the dangers of the journey or his debilitating asthma

Esther: A Story of the Oregon Trail Ann Sophia Stephens,2019-05-11 Our every footstep treads upon a grave The keel of the snowy pinioned vessel but turns a fleecy furrow while plowing its way over the abodes of death Earth is but one vast tomb where sleep side by side commingling their dust the king and peasant the master and slave the beautiful and the repulsive Beneath the iron clad feet of our swift steeds beneath the thunder rush and lightning speed of engines beneath the quick firm tread of business men and beneath the gentle pressure of the daintily slipped feet of lovely women lie the mouldering form the dust of stalwart men and the more delicate clay that was fashioned by the Master hand into childhood girlhood womanhood beauty We turn from scenes of busy life and enter the deep forest unthinking and careless that beneath our footsteps lie the mouldering bones of the war painted warrior beside his broken spear and stringless bow and in another place the dusky forest maiden who once wreathed amid the dull blackness of her hair the gorgeously tinted buds and blossoms of the God cultured prairie But so it is The star that leads civilization westward shines sadly upon the graves of a people almost extinct a people that have been hunted ruthlessly from their greenwood haunts till every year has seen their graves multiplying thicker and thicker in the wilderness Then the Anglo Saxon comes to plow it up and plant corn above the dead warriors stooping now and then to pick up a stone arrow head from his furrow and examine it

curiously as if he did not know what soil his sacrilegious plow was upturning The Indian sees his council fires flicker out one by one scarcely rising skyward long enough to gild the ruins of his bark and skin covered wigwam or light up the ashes over his deserted altars Yon star that leads westward has no halting place for him till it sets on the calm Pacific writing on its blue waters the history of a people that have perished It was a lovely morning The sun rose from its nightly course radiant with beauty kissing the dew from the tiny cups of the myriad flowers tinging with gold the emerald leaves of the forest and gilding the crests of a thousand little billows that were just waking to life in the shaded pools of the mountain streams It was a scene of wondrous loveliness a scene that the eye might willingly rest upon forever while the soul drank in its freshness till satiated with the very excess of beauty A scene like that the pen or pencil of man are impatient to portray The Master Artist God upon the canvass of his own created world has alone written it out Under one of those picturesque clumps of trees that broke the luxuriant monotony of the rolling grass land a corral of covered wagons had been drawn up for the night and now stood with the canvass swaying in the breeze circling a snowy little tent which had been pitched against the trunk of a noble tulip tree and stood beneath its deep green branches like a great white bird rested on the grass The little camp had formed itself late the night before and the deep breathing of many a stalwart sleeper came from the covered wagons while the guard kept his post yet but with a weary fall of the body and a wistful look at the wagons for he envied the sleepers there with all the earnestness of a tired man
