

THE STORY OF WILLIAM TELL

(intro) The people of Switzerland were not always free and happy as they are today. Many years ago a proud tyrant, whose name was Gessler, ruled over them, and made their lot a bitter one indeed.

(A) One day a man called William Tell came riding into the village of Altdorf with his little son by his side. He came from the nearby town of Bürglen, and was reputed to be the best crossbowman and the best handler of a boat in the region.

(B) This tyrant set up a tall pole in the public square, and put his own cap on the top of it; and then he gave orders that every man who came into the town should bow down before it. But there was one man, named William Tell, who would not do this. He stood up straight with folded arms, and laughed at the swinging cap. He would not bow down to Gessler himself.

(C) When Gessler heard of this, he was very angry. He was afraid that other men would disobey, and that soon the whole country would rebel against him. He did not want this to happen! He wanted the townspeople to always show their respect to him! So he made up his mind to punish the bold man in front of all the townspeople to show that this disrespect would not be tolerated.

(A) William Tell's home was among the mountains, and he was a famous hunter. No one in all the land could shoot with bow and arrow so well as he.

(D) Gessler knew this, and so he thought of a cruel plan to make the hunter's own skill bring him to grief. If William Tell is such the great hunter in all the land, he should be able to prove his greatness under any circumstance. He ordered that William Tell's little boy should be made to stand up in the public square with an apple on his head; and then he bade Tell shoot the apple with one of his arrows.
