Storytellers Of Poetry The:

The Storytellers and Other Poems Thomas Frosch, 2021-05-06 The Storytellers and Other Poems is Thomas Frosch's fourth book of poetry. The poems are organized into several sections. Journeys includes a voyage to the childhood of the author's father on New York's Lower East Side where among other imaginary and real encounters he is dispatched to get knishes for Freud and Jung learns about horse thieves and witnesses the accidental death of his sister. The section also includes a journey of tricksters from different times and cultures to a banquet lunch orders of famous authors and the tale of a detective on assignment in Disneyland. Time Pieces includes a series of short poems on the seasons and a variety of dramatic moments like a surprisingly peaceful gathering of different African animals at a desert well a batter's getting hit by a pitch and the sound of Covid ambulances on a perfect spring day. The first part of Adaptations Pictures into Words includes a narrative based on Douglas Anderson's Desert Plain which appears on the cover of this volume. The second part Words into Other Words adapts passages by Dante, Chaucer and Housman and a beer commercial and it also includes an updated two page version of Schnitzler's 1897 Reigen in which the lovers communicate by cell phone. In Storytellers are various scenes of creativity written oral and visual including an author's call to a computer help line that turns into an encounter with a muse. Here too is the book's extended title poem that celebrates the small ceramic figurines known as Storytellers. Close By and Far Away tells of experiences that are distant in one way and inwardly resonant in another. Death is entertained by a woman who has no respect for him and whom he comes to miss when she's gone. The famous poetic nightingales of Europe make a sudden appearance in sunshine on Long Island on an ideal day and a bunch of seaweed makes its slow voyage to immortality in the Sargasso Sea. The poems in the final section Taking Care concern taking care or not of others of the environment and as in a poem about a saxophonist practicing in the park of one's chosen work.
