

A Christmas Story

Author Unknown

Years ago, there was a very rich man whose main interest in life was art collecting. He was a widower and he had an only child, a son, who from an early age shared his father's passion. Together they travelled around the world, buying the finest pictures for their collection. Priceless works by old masters as well as pictures by Picasso, Van Gogh and Monet adorned the walls of their house.

The old man looked on with satisfaction as his son became an experienced art collector. The young man had a trained eye and sharp business mind and his father beamed with pride as they dealt with art collectors around the world.

War put an end to their travels. As winter approached, the young man left to serve his country. After only a few short weeks, his father received a telegram. His beloved son was missing in action.

The art collector anxiously awaited more news, fearing he would never see his son again. Within days, his fears were confirmed. The young man had died while taking a fellow soldier to hospital.

Miserable and lonely, the old man thought about the upcoming Christmas holidays with pain and sadness. The joy of the season — a season that he and his son had so looked forward to — would visit his house no longer.

On Christmas morning, a knock on the door awakened the depressed old man. As he walked to the door, the masterpieces of art on the walls only reminded him that his son was not coming home.

As he opened the door, he saw a young soldier with a large package in his hand. The soldier introduced himself to the man by saying, "I was a friend of your son. I was the one he was rescuing when he died. May I come in for a few moments? I have something to show you."

from around the world gathered to bid

The soldier told the old man how his son had saved his life and how everyone in the regiment loved and respected him.

"I'm an artist," said the soldier, "and I want to give you this." He handed the package to the old man. The old man unwrapped the package and saw that it was a picture — a portrait of his son.

The old man knew enough about art to understand that the picture would never be called the work of a genius, but it was his son's face, his features, his expression. The likeness was striking. Overcome with emotion, the man thanked the soldier.

A few hours later, after the soldier had left, the old man poured himself a glass of whisky, sat in his armchair and spent the Christmas night looking at the gift he had received.

During the days and weeks that followed, the man realised that even though his son was no longer with him, the boy's life would go on because of those who remembered him. He soon learnt that his son had rescued dozens of wounded soldiers before a bullet stilled his caring heart. As the stories of his son's gallantry continued to reach him, fatherly pride and satisfaction began to ease the grief.

The painting of his son soon became his most prized possession. He valued it more than the pieces which museums around the world would be proud to have, and he told everybody it was the greatest gift he had ever received.

The following spring, the old man became ill and passed away. The art world was all anticipation. As the collector had no relatives and his only son was dead, all his paintings would be sold at an auction. According to the will of the old man, the pictures had to be auctioned on Christmas day, the day he had received his greatest gift.

The day soon arrived and art collectors on some of the world's most famous

A Ghost Story of Christmas Charles Dickens, 2015-10-17 Marley was dead to begin with There is no doubt whatever about that The register of his burial was signed by the clergyman the clerk the undertaker and the chief mourner Scrooge signed it and Scrooge s name was good upon Change for anything he chose to put his hand to Old Marley was as dead as a door nail Mind I don t mean to say that I know of my own knowledge what there is particularly dead about a door nail I might have been inclined myself to regard a coffin nail as the dearest piece of ironmongery in the trade But the wisdom of our ancestors is in the simile and my unhallowed hands shall not disturb it or the Country's done for You will therefore permit me to repeat emphatically that Marley was as dead as a door nail Scrooge knew he was dead Of course he did How could it be otherwise Scrooge and he were partners for I don't know how many years Scrooge was his sole executor his sole administrator his sole assign his sole residuary legatee his sole friend and sole mourner And even Scrooge was not so dreadfully cut up by the sad event but that he was an excellent man of business on the very day of the funeral and solemnised it with an undoubted bargain The mention of Marley's funeral brings me back to the point I started from There is no doubt that Marley was dead This must be distinctly understood or nothing wonderful can come of the story I am going to relate If we were not perfectly convinced that Hamlet's Father died before the play began there would be nothing more remarkable in his taking a stroll at night in an easterly wind upon his own ramparts than there would be in any other middle aged gentleman rashly turning out after dark in a breezy spot say Saint Paul's Churchyard for instance literally to astonish his son's weak mind Scrooge never painted out Old Marley's name There it stood years afterwards above the warehouse door Scrooge and Marley The firm was known as Scrooge and Marley Sometimes people new to the business called Scrooge Scrooge and sometimes Marley but he answered to both names It was all the same to him
