

The Legend of Sleepy Hollow

Ichabod Crane was a schoolmaster in the Hudson Valley in the late 1700s. After the American Revolution, the war a highly educated man, but his many talents he believed in ghosts. Although he was tall and thin, he was known to be a coward. He had a peculiar idea of the battle that was fought in the Hudson Valley. He was the son of a wealthy farmer and had been a soldier in the French and Indian War. He had, however, been off to a university during the Revolution. Fearing along bravely in the war, Ichabod wanted to keep his spirits up, for he imagined he could have ghostly shapes using the bare branches of the trees peering at him with evil eyes.

One in September night Ichabod was returning from a party. Crossing Sleepy Hollow he became extremely nervous. For he seemed to hear the spirit about the place. It was said that the hollow was haunted by the ghost of a Hessian soldier whose head had been knocked loose by a musketball during the Revolution. Floating along bravely in the air, Ichabod wanted to keep his spirits up, for he imagined he could have ghostly shapes using the bare branches of the trees peering at him with evil eyes.

He continued the path of his horse, instead a herd in the road and saw the shape of a light and a huge black horse leaping in the air. To his horse, he realized that no head set atop the horseman's neck. To his horse, he realized that no head set atop the horseman's neck. To his horse, he realized that no head set atop the horseman's neck.

The next day Ichabod was missing. The townspeople searched for him and found his horse at the church and bits of a smashed jack-o'-lantern, but they never saw Ichabod again. Some say that the Headless Horseman managed to carry him off, others that Brom Bones had dressed as the Horseman to scare Ichabod away from Katrina. What do you think?

Guide Ichabod and his quaking horse out of the hollow, across the stone bridge and to the church without encountering any of the specters, especially the Headless Horseman.
