How to Design Questions and Tasks to Assess Student Thinking Susan M. Brookhart, 2014-08-20 With new standards emphasizing higher order thinking skills, students will have to demonstrate their ability to do far more than simply remember facts and procedures. But what's the best way for teachers to ensure that students have such skills? In this highly accessible guide, author Susan M. Brookhart shows how to do just that by providing specific guidelines for designing targeted questions and tasks that align with standards and assess students' ability to think at higher levels. Aided by dozens of examples across grade levels and subject areas, readers will learn how to take a student perspective and view assessment questions and tasks as problems to solve. Design multiple choice questions that require higher order thinking; understand the difference between open and closed questions and how to use open questions effectively; vary and control the features of performance assessment tasks including cognitive level and difficulty to target different thinking skills; and manage the assessment of higher order thinking within the larger context of teaching and learning. Brookhart also provides an idea bank that teachers can use to jump start their own thinking as they create assessments. Timely and practical, How to Design Questions and Tasks to Assess Student Thinking is essential reading for 21st century teachers who want their students to excel in the classroom and beyond

The Birth of Meaning in Hindu Thought David B. Zilberman, 2012-12-06 In his letter to B. K. Matilal dated February 20, 1977, the author of this book wrote about his work on Advaita Vedānta. It was not to present Advaita in the light of current problems of the logic of scientific discovery and modern philosophy of language, but just the contrary. I do not believe that any logic without metaphysics or philosophy of language without thinking is possible. This passage alone may serve as the clue to Zilberman's understanding and mode of explaining that specific and highly original approach to not of philosophy that he himself nicknamed modal. Four points would seem to me to be most essential here: First, a philosophy cannot have anything unthinking as its object of investigation. Language to Zilberman is not a phenomenon of consciousness but a spontaneously working natural mechanism, like for instance mind to some Buddhist philosophers. It may of course be used for and by consciousness; consciousness may see itself so to speak in language, but only secondarily, only as in one of its modifications, derivations or modalities. That is why to Zilberman, linguistic as to Kant, psychology cannot and must not figure as the primary ground for any philosophical investigation
