

RIGHTS VS PRIVILEGES

Rights refer to entitlements determined by law and custom, while privileges refer to special advantages or opportunities granted by power, authority, or circumstance.

RIGHTS

Rights are legal or moral entitlements that individuals have by virtue of being human. Basic human rights safeguard and empower people serving as an anchor that cannot be tampered with.

Examples of rights include freedom of speech, fair voting procedures, and equitable legal proceedings - all crucial aspects that uphold society's integrity.

PRIVILEGES

Privileges are benefits or advantages provided to people based on their status or position. They may come from sources such as legislation, societal norms, and personal networks.

Examples of privileges include private education, personal assistants, access to the best parking lot, and (for children) rewards for good behavior in class.
