The Learning Process and School Practice May Violet Seagoe, 1970 The Learning Process Rosella Linskie, 1983 This volume originally published in 1977 by Litton Educational Publishing Inc is divided into four main parts Part I The Learner and Part II The Teacher deal with the physical emotional social and intellectual aspects of the learner and the teacher in the educational process Part III The Learning Process emphasizes the interactions of learners and teachers and specific philosophies and methods employed such as Gestalt Piaget and Montessori Part IV The Never Ending Odyssey expounds the main theme of the text that learning is an on going life long process The Collective Wisdom of Practice Chen Schechter, 2019-10-09 Leverage Professional Wisdom with Asset Based Professional Learning Many professional learning designs are built on the assumption that we learn best by studying our failures However learning from failure often evokes responses of denial avoidance and the same defensive dynamics that contributed to the failure in the first place Schechter's resource presents the Collective Learning from Success approach This fresh new assets based framework will shift educators minds from focusing in isolation on failure to continuously deliberating together sharing past experiences and best practices and solving problems related to teaching and learning Whether you serve as a teacher school or district leader or a policy maker your professional growth will benefit by reflecting on actionable knowledge through collective inquiry This book offers educators an opportunity to come together in forming a productive alternative to the learning from failure paradigm The Collective Wisdom of Practice provides a model for how to learn from successes by providing An assets based approach to designing and implementing professional learning Strategies to focus on learning from educators past successes Multinational case studies sample learning materials templates and tools A framework that can be applied to multiple levels such as grade and subject areas building level system level and policy level Grounded in more than 20 years of extensive research in the US and internationally this approach will have a powerful influence on professional learning Learn to nurture your wisdom of practice to meet the challenge of preparing students to be co creators of society Learning, Social Interaction and Diversity - Exploring Identities in School Practices Eva Hjörne, Geerdina van der Aalsvoort, Guida de Abreu, 2012-09-05 The main idea of the book is to contribute to a broader understanding of learning identity and diversity by presenting actual research findings that were retrieved from classroom settings and related social practices Learning is to a large extent an ongoing social process as both students and their teachers learn by being part of shared social practices through social interactions that facilitate learning gains Sociocultural research shows that the organization of schooling promotes or restricts learning and is a crucial factor to understand how children from a diversity of backgrounds profit from instruction This is a first urgent issue to be considered by teachers and teacher education in our socio and culturally diverse society A second issue is the on going debate about learning as a process that involves the construction of identities in schools and classrooms and in the transitions between school and home practices Last but not least since school practices can be addressed from the perspective of diversity and special educational needs an on going discussion about optimizing pedagogical approaches is of main importance to allow maximum educational effectiveness Our potential audience for this book are researchers post graduate students in education and psychology teachers teacher education other academics and policy makers
